Knox Lashes 'Interference' Of New Deal In Business

Candidate Upbraids Foes Before 20,000 at Hagerstown Rally;

Sudden Rainstorm Sends Him to Cover

Soaked Throng Cheers References to Supreme Court Decisions.

Text of Colonel Knox's address—Page 11.

By Sidney Olson.
A Staff Correspondent.

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 19.—His white linen suit damp from a sudden rainstorm that drove him from the platform, Col. Frank Knox, of Illinois, Republican Vice Presidential candidate, shook a freckled fist at the rainy skies tonight and shouted belligerent criticisms of the New Deal's "interference" with business.

Before nearly 20,000 rainsoaked citizens of four States, assembled at the Hagerstown Fair Grounds for the annual picnic of the United Retail Merchants Association, Knox drove again and again at the Administration's "try-anything-once philosophy," taking as his keynote that "the business of the country cannot be run from Washington."

The attendance, less than half expected, keenly disappointed Republican leaders, and one member of the retinue of Gov. Harry W. Nice, of Maryland, muttered:

"I hate to admit it, but I wish we had some of that Roosevelt weather."

Rushed From Platform.

Knox was rushed from the platform as the cloudburst drenched the crowd, 15 minutes before his scheduled half-hour broadcast.

He spoke from a canopied tent in the infield of the puddled race track, invisible to a majority of the crowd which listened closely, but kept their hands in their pockets out of the steady, slashing rain.

From within the small brown-canopied tent, Knox's booming voice roared his attack of bureaucracy, governmental extravagance and the "un-American fomenting of class hatreds." From under the sea of umbrellas the crowd shouted its applause through the sheets of rain that obscured the speaker, cheering loudest at his sarcastic references to the Administration's defeat in the Supreme Court.

From his assault on the "mistakes" of the New Deal, Knox passed to a three-point program for the restoration of the country to a pre-New Deal prosperity, demanding a return to simplicity and economy in Government, and the re-establishment of national confidence through a sound currency and a hands-off-business policy of national administration.

Pays Tribute to Ritchie.

The colonel, grinning despite the downpour, deviated from his planned address to pay tribute to the late Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland, drawing a tremendous cheer from the crowd as he said that in his opinion the Governor would have been of the same mind on the issues of the day.

Knox aimed his address directly at the audience, composed chiefly of merchants and their families from Maryland, Pennsylvania, Virginia and West Virginia.

Terming middlemen "one of the great agencies of American economic life," he denounced the "misconception of our economic system" which sees "the merchant as a mere unproductive middleman," and outlined his view of the system as a great partnership to which all contribute.

He said:

"In the face of these simple economic truths, the fundamental partnership of labor and trade and agriculture and industry is not everywhere recognized. There has been a growing tendency toward group rivalry, group hatred and group legislation. There has even been a tendency on the part of the Government to take sides."

Calls Alliance Monstrous.

The sandy-haired colonel, evidently referring to a speech made by Resettlement Administrator Rexford G. Tugwell in Los Angeles last year, went on:

"Not so long ago a high Government official urged a political alliance between workers and farmers to take over the government of this Nation.

"Such a proposal is monstrous. It is un-American. * * * It makes us a Nation of armed camps, snarling and fighting to obtain special advantage from Government. This is not the American way. In Europe this tendency has developed into class strife, revolutions and dictatorships."

Driving again and again at his theme—that Government interference with business has halted recovery—Knox recited a long list of New Deal "mistakes."

He lauded the American system of "free enterprise," saying:

"It works, even in depression. It does not break down, although it may be badly wounded by a world depression. We have been giving the other system a trial.

"We plowed up cotton and thousands of cotton workers went on relief.

"We paid farmers not to grow wheat and had to import millions of bushels to get bread. We paid rich sugar corporations in Hawaii millions of dollars not to grow sugar, and had to import millions of pounds from foreign sugar growers."

Japanese Navy Visitors Hear Standley Talk

Good-Will Trip to U. S. Is Praised as 'Breaking Down Suspicions.'

Vice Admiral Zengo Yoshida and approximately 1,000 members of the Japanese navy—officers, midshipmen and enlisted men—yesterday heard Admiral William H. Standley, Acting Secretary of the Navy, term their good-will visit to the United States a force toward "the breaking down of the barrier of doubt and suspicion which is gradually coming between our two peoples."

The Japanese arrived here Tuesday afternoon on the Iwate and Yakumo, warships which took part in the battle of the Sea of Japan in 1905, and which are now part of the imperial training squadron.

Today Admiral Yoshida, accompanied by 58 officers and 205 midshipmen, will visit the Naval Academy at Annapolis and will then return to Washington to visit the grave of a Japanese naval cadet at Oak Hill Cemetery.

The visitors will leave the Capital Saturday.

Admiral Yoshida yesterday received calls from his country's Ambassador, from Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen and from Admiral Standley, after he had first called upon them.

He also called upon the Secretary of State. This visit was returned by Undersecretary of State Phillips, in the absence of Secretary Hull.

Admiral Standley addressed members of the Japanese training squadron yesterday morning at the eastern end of the Lincoln Memorial reflecting pool. He told his listeners that he welcomed them not only as Acting Secretary of the Navy but "in the light of a friend, one who looks with a friendly and sympathetic attitude toward the great progress your countrymen have made since your doors were opened to the world by the visit of Admiral Perry in 1853."

The Acting Secretary of the Navy explained to the visitors that President Roosevelt's absence from the Capital prevented his welcoming them in person. He asked them to take back from the American people "a message of friendship to your own people at home."

Host at Luncheon.

While 600 Japanese enlisted men had a picnic at Hains Point, Admiral Standley entertained Admiral Yoshida and his party at luncheon at the Mayflower.

Following this affair, the Japanese admiral journeyed to Arlington to place a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Last night Capt. Tamon Yamaguchi, naval attache at the Japanese Embassy, was host at a reception and dinner at the Mayflower in honor of the officers of the training squadron ships. The staff officer is Commander Kyugoro Shimamoto. Capt. Toshihisa Nakamura is in command of the Yakumo and Capt. Kakuji Kakuda is captain of the Iwate.

Officers and midshipmen of the squadron went on a sightseeing tour of Washington yesterday. Today another group of 600 enlisted men will tour the Capital in buses and will lunch at Hains Point.

Social Security—and You!

Doubts Voiced About Present Law.

By Felix Bruner.

There has been little objection to a social security plan, but there is a grave question of whether the particular plan provided by the present law will work. Not even the most enthusiastic advocates of the law contend that it is perfect or that it will not have to be changed. In fact, Congress instructed the Social Security Board to make a study looking to strengthening and improving the law.

One of the difficulties involved will be the handling and disposition of the tremendous sums of money that will be pouring into the old-age annuity and unemployment insurance funds as time goes on. Within a few years employers will be required to pay into the Federal Treasury a tax amounting to 6 per cent of their pay rolls. In addition, employes will be paying an income tax on their total earnings up to $3,000 of 3 per cent. This means that the Government will be collecting 9 per cent of all the money paid out to employes up to $3,000 of their earnings.

Already attempts have been made by a few employers to pass the entire tax to their employes through the expedient of cutting wages in the amount of the tax. Apparently little can be done about this situation. While employers are required to pay the taxes and in theory they will be doing so, no one has discovered a way to prevent wage cuts.

The Senate Finance Committee, in considering the old-age annuity plan, estimated that by 1944 collections will amount to $1,000,000,000 a year and that by 1950 they would amount to twice that much. Mean-

Farley Assails 'Scare' Efforts Of Republicans

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 19.—Democratic Chairman James A. Farley tonight struck out at what he termed the "scare" campaign of the Republican Party.

In his first political speech since the national conventions, Farley asserted that the Republican campaign "consists of nothing more than an effort to break down the faith of the people in the Roosevelt Administration by a constant barrage of scare propaganda."

Speaking over a broadcasting company network on the occasion of Democratic jubilee banquets in several Michigan cities, the Democratic leader said:

"The G. O. P. is vainly hoping that enough voters be frightened to secure the success of their ticket. They underestimate the intelligence of the American voters."

Spoke From New York.

Farley originally was scheduled to speak in Detroit, but was held here, he said, by "the demands of the campaign."

He listed the following as "the two favorite bogeymen in the State and dreary scare campaign which the Republicans are using in their efforts to intimidate the electorate":

1. That the public debt will bankrupt the country.
2. That sinister forces are at work in the Roosevelt Administration to weaken the Constitution.

He answered these charges by quoting from statements made some time ago by two Michigan Republican leaders. He quoted Senator James Couzens as saying there was

Hopkins Holds Drought Means New Relief Bill

$5,000,000 Monthly Called Prospective Need of Stricken States.

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 19.—A congressional appropriation to replenish relief funds, which may be drained of $5,000,000 monthly, to give WPA jobs to drought sufferers, was forecast today by Harry L. Hopkins, WPA administrator, after a conference with President Roosevelt.

Hopkins told reporters the $5,000,000 monthly would be needed to provide job relief ultimately for 120,000 to 150,000 persons in the drought regions.

"The money," he said, "is coming out of the new relief act and I think the drought will have to be adjusted by congressional appropriation in the long run."

Already, Hopkins asserted, WPA has put 90,000 individuals to work on farm-to-market roads, dams and similar projects. They are being paid an average of $40 a month, he added.

Morgenthau, Bell Present.

The 90,000, the WPA chieftain said, are in addition to persons being helped with grants and feed and seed loans by the Resettlement Administration.

Secretary Morgenthau and Acting Director Daniel W. Bell of the Budget Bureau, Hopkins said, attended the drought parley at the summer White House to talk over the question of financing drought relief.

W. Frank Persons, director of the Federal Employment Service, and Walter Burr, assistant director, also sat at the conference table.

Preparing for his trip to the drought States starting Tuesday night from Washington, Mr. Roosevelt earlier in the day looked into banking conditions in the dust bowl

'Transparent' Figure of Woman Is Exhibited at Museum in N. Y.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 19.—The first "transparent woman" ever made, a figure that looks like a woman sculptured of glass, with all her vital organs visible, was placed on exhibition today at the Museum of Science and Industry here.

The figure is similar to that of the transparent male exhibited at the Chicago Century of Progress. The woman was made at a cost of $10,000 at the Hygiene Museum of Dresden.

The figure was ordered and paid for by S. H. Camp, Jackson, Mich., maker of medical appliances. Camp said today that after the figure has been exhibited here "she" will be shown to the American College of Surgeons at Philadelphia in October, then probably be taken to Chicago for museum exhibition and afterward to State and other medical meetings.

This woman is not complete. She lacks muscles. Her body is a new glass-like material, inside of which are shown all her bones, her vital organs, including brain, and her arteries and larger veins. Camp said he expects to have a medical lecturer accompany the figure.

The various vital organs can be illuminated separately by lights concealed inside the statuette. They are imitations of natural color. It was announced that 20 years of laboratory research were required for the correct placing of the organs.

Hughes Mentioned As N. Y. Candidate

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Aug. 19.—Names of two attorneys with national reputations have been added to the list of those mentioned as possible Republican gubernatorial candidates to oppose Gov. Herbert H. Lehman in November. They are Charles Evans Hughes, jr., son of Chief Justice and Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, and John Lord O'Brien, of Buffalo, former Assistant Attorney General of the United States.

Gov. Lehman, greatest vote-getting Governor in New York's history, has been depended upon by the Democrats to swing the State to the support of President Roosevelt in the November elections.

Welfare Unit Asks 40 Pct. Budget Boost

With School Items, Pleas Already Top '37 Figure by $8,298,092.

By James D. Secrest.

Following the lead of the public schools, the Board of Public Welfare yesterday asked for a 40 per cent budgetary increase in its 1938 estimates over current appropriations.

Ignoring economy pleas of the District Commissioners, the board requested a total of $11,381,783, or $3,267,433 more than was carried in the 1937 act, which was $8,114,350. Thus, with only tw departmental budgets in, 1938 estimates already exceed 1937 appropriations by $8,298,092, as the increase asked for schools amounted to $5,030,659.

A substantial portion of the public welfare increase, however, results from congressional suggestions that estimates provide for standard working hours for all employes, with annual leave of 26 days. The board asked 465 employes, with salaries aggregating $552,567, for this purpose and additional amounts for temporary employes in several divisions where the hours are standard, but the personnel is insufficient to permit the 26-day leave.

Increase Asked For.

An increase of $700,000 was requested for unemployment relief, a rise from $1,600,000 to $2,300,000. This is $300,000 more than the 1937 estimate, but about $700,000 below the unofficial etsimate of the need by Commissioner George E. Allen.

Continual expansion of the old-age insurance plan is responsible for a jump from $284,265 to $411,840. The estimate for needy blind pensions remains unchanged at $54,000.

The largest increases asked by the Welfare Board, however, are for the Workhouse and Reformatory and the District Training School. For the former the gain is $838,245 and for the latter $593,847.

The Workhouse and Reformatory requested 131 new employes, from a second resident physician down, at a cost of $196,840. In addition, they allowed $80,000 for 56 new positions, to place the institutions on a standard working-hour basis with a 26-day annual leave.

Building Program Included.

A permanent building program costing more than $500,000 accounts for the major remaining part of the increase. This would include a new cell block at $35,000; completion of the women's buildings, $74,000; a receiving department, dairy barn, two poultry buildings, storage house and garage at the Workhouse, $36,000; three dormitories, tuberculosis hospital, industrial building and storage shed at Reformatory, $124,000, and two officers' residences and plans for future building at both institutions, $11,400.

The board also proposes a larger working capital for industrial enterprizes and money to replace obsolete equipment, including two motion-picture machines, a fire wagon and a bus.

An addition of $25,000 is asked for the jail to place guards and other employes on the standard-hour scale set up by the Civil Service Commission. Creation of the job of assistant superintendent also is proposed.

New Hospital Aids Asked.

For the adult Tuberculosis Hospital to open at Glenn Dale early next year the board requested 58 new employes at a cost of $65,980 and 92 additional employes at $103,820 in order to place nurses and orderlies on an 8-hour day.

Although the Board of Education suggested that it be permitted to build quarters for the Wilson Teachers College on the site of the old Tuberculosis Hospital at Fourteenth and Upshur streets northwest, the welfare board asked $51,320 to modernize the building and convert it into an obstetrical annex for Gallinger Hospital.

A variety of improvements were proposed for the Children's Tuberculosis Sanatorium, including a playground, quarters for employes, apartment residences for physicians and an addition to the laundry. The total would cost approximately $250,500.

To place nurses and orderlies at Gallinger Hospital on a 44-hour week, the board submitted an estimate of 53 new jobs at $63,000. An

U. S. Ships Told to Quit Palma As Attack by Loyalists Nears

Spanish Government Warns American Consul Bombardment of Rebel-Controlled City by Sea, Air Will Start in 10 Hours.

American vessels were given ten hours today to get out of the harbor of Palma, in the Balearic Islands, or face the dangers of a Spanish government attack on the rebel-controlled city from air and sea.

Anxious for the safety of 33 Americans still there, the State Department immediately instructed the heavy cruiser Quincy, which arrived off Palma this morning, to sail with all those who could be persuaded to leave, including Robert D. Longyear, of Cambridge, Mass., the American consul.

The warning of an imminent attack on Palma was transmitted to the American consul at Barcelona by Capt. Alberto Bayo, chief of a government military column which has landed in the islands. A translation of his message relayed to the State Department, said:

"Spanish chivalry obliges me to request you to advise with the greatest rapidity vessels of the nation which you represent which are anchored in the Bay of Palma de Mellorca that ten hours from receipt you advise they abandon the jurisdictional waters, since I see myself ordered to open bombardment by air and sea against the said place.

"Thanking you, I greet you."

Lynn W. Franklin, consul at Barcelona, immediately notified the Quincy, which presumably communicated with Consul Longyear.

The Spanish officer was believed to have telegraphed American officials in Barcelona instead of at Palma in order to prevent the information falling into the hands of rebel forces at the latter place.

After the warning the Quincy was asked to broadcast word of it to all American shipping in the vicinity. The battleship Oklahoma was reported en route there from Malaga. There was no information here as to what other ships might be in the threatened zone.

Less than three weeks ago more than a score of Americans were removed from Palma by the American export liner Exochorda just a few hours before government airplanes bombed the city.

The Spanish Revolt.

Spanish government authorities, warning of their intention to bombard Palma, urged American vessels there to leave.

Rebel leaders declared they had been assured of Italian and German support for the government they set up if the revolt succeeds.

Reports two Spanish loyalist warships halted and searched a German ship off Cadiz aroused Berlin. Reprisals were hinted.

Premier Mussolini kept Italy's war machine geared for any eventuality, but was reported ready to compromise on a neutrality plan.

France avowed she would abandon her neutrality pact effort if Premier Mussolini were found to be aiding the rebels.

Great Britain applied a strict embargo on shipments of arms and planes to Spanish belligerents.

In some British quarters it was suggested the United States act as mediator in Spain.

Fears the Spanish conflict may spread into international war were expressed in Moscow.

Rebels again bombed San Sebastian. The loyalist defense was reported near collapse. Rebel victory in the siege of Irun was believed near.

Catalonia virtually seceded from Spain. Industries were seized as a government modeled after that of Soviet Russia was set up.

Assault Plans Sped.

With Rebel Troops, Burgos, Spain, Aug. 19.—The Fascist-rebel junta tonight speeded its plans for a direct assault on Madrid and declared that if and when rebels take the loyalist capital Italy and Germany will back them up.

A high official of the insurgent forces said he had been assured of full recognition by the German and Italian governments the day the rebel forces capture Madrid.

The assurance of support, the rebel leaders intimated, had been given them through commanders of German and Italian warships in "courtesy calls" to the rebel war lord, Gen. Francisco Franco, in his Morocco and Cadiz headquarters.

For the second day the rebel junta continued its complaints that the loyalist forces were using poison-gas bombs on their countrymen.

Compromise Likely.

Rome, Aug. 19.—Italian resentment over alleged indirect French intervention in the Spanish rebellion was given strong expression here tonight, although Fascist officials indicated a compromise agreement or neutrality accord was in sight.

Under the agreement, it was said, Italy would waive her request for muzzling the press, public meetings and speeches, and France would agree to extend an arms embargo to private citizens.

Military circles said Mussolini's preparations for any eventuality were complete.

The Giornale d'Italia editorially made many serious charges concerning "this neutrality which France asks other powers to observe, though this guarantee is violated by the French themselves every day.

"So great is the assurance of the Spanish government that the French government is with it that at Barcelona they are planning to pass supplies across French territory."

Reich to Back Rebels.

Berlin, Aug. 19 (AP).—The Nazi German government, well-informed sources said tonight, will back up a Fascist rebel government in Spain as soon as the rebels prove they can maintain order and protect foreigners.

From this, observers were led to

Terrorist Conspiracy Laid Directly to Trotzky as Trial Opens.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Aug. 19.—Calmly aware executioners' rifles answer confessions such as theirs, 16 conspirators—including two who once helped rule Soviet Russia—admitted today plotting a reign of terror to seize power in the U. S. S. R.

Gregory Zinovieff and Leon Kameneff, two who confessed to the conspiracy which aimed first at the assassination of Dictator Josef Stalin, governed in a triumvirate with him 13 years ago.

Their confessions contained revelation after revelation as the government herded the ring of terrorists into the witness box to hear from their own lips how they schemed to bring the exiled Leon Trotzky back into power.

In a flat, almost bored voice, G. Evdokimoff, former chairman of the Leningrad Soviet, told the court how the 16 vied for the "honor" of shooting Stalin.

"Zinovieff said the honor belonged to his group, not to the ones sent into Russia by Trotzky," Evdokimoff testified concerning a meeting at Zinovieff's home, "and he won the argument."

Hardly had the session been opened in a court-martial atmosphere with bayonet-armed guards mounted over the prisoners' boxes, than Zinovieff rose and declared:

"I am fully guilty."

His colleagues followed suit, although two, declaring they had not plotted directly to kill the Soviet leaders, entered reservations to their guilty pleas on three formal charges.

Zinovieff was asked by the prosecutor if he organized the terrorists.

"Yes," he replied.

"Did you plot the death of Sergei M. Kiroff (Stalin's chief aid)?"

"Yes."

"Did you organize the plan to kill Stalin?"

"Yes. I am guilty of every charge in the indictment."

As the trial started amid the elegance of the former Moscow Nobles Club Hall, the prosecutors laid the plot directly to Leon Trotzky. They said he and the co-conspirators bid for international aid to overthrow the government.

The court will hold two long sessions each day to speed the trial's

Loyalists Stop German Vessel; Reprisal Likely

Berlin Paper Says Incident Is 'Serious;' Port Barred to Reich Ship.

By the United Press.

Berlin, Aug. 19.—Action of two Spanish loyalist warships in halting and warning the German ship Kamerun off the rebel port of Cadiz may lead to reprisals, it was believed here tonight.

Obviously inspired articles in Berlin morning newspapers referred to the incident as "serious" and "flagrant violation of international law."

Before halting the Kamerun the Spanish submarine B-6 and the cruiser Libertad fired three shots at the vessel 7½ miles off Cadiz. The Kamerun was allowed to proceed, but was forbidden to enter the port of Cadiz, although it was under orders to call there for refugees. The loyalist warships forced it to proceed into the Mediterranean.

It was significant that all German newspapers, reporting the halting and search of the Kamerun, referred to the loyalist Spanish sailors as "pirates, buccaneers and freebooters," indicating the terms may have been chosen deliberately to brand those responsible as "outlaws."

Leftists Take Over Liner on High Seas

By the Associated Press.

St. Nazaire, France, Aug. 19.—The Leftist crew of the Spanish liner Cristobal Colon, which has been wandering in the Atlantic under government orders during the civil war, took command of the ship and its remaining 344 passengers tonight.

A nine-man crew committee approved the landing of 104 passengers at Nantes. The liner then returned to the harbor of St. Nazaire and remained at anchor.

French officials who were permitted to board the vessel said order was perfect, although passengers and crew were tiring of the long odyssey during which the Cristobal Colon crossed the Atlantic from Vera Cruz, Mexico, and then moved from port to port while the Spanish revolt raged.

Grain Prices Rocket at Chicago As Drought Keeps Grip on West

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 19.—Corn prices jumped to the highest peak since the postwar period today as Weather Bureau crop experts reported the drought was growing worse in the farm belt.

Quotations rose as high as $1.37 a bushel on the Chicago Board of Trade, again passing wheat in a reversal of normal market conditions. The previous high was $2.17 in 1920, with an all-time record of $2.36 in August, 1917.

Corn futures, wheat, oats and rye hit 1936 highs in the wake of reports of continuing heat on Western plains.

Although the Weather Bureau saw thundershowers as possible relief for stifling Kansas and Oklahoma tonight or tomorrow, the bureau's crop observers said general conditions in the drought region were growing steadily worse.

"Devastation became more widespread" in the corn and wheat-growing States during the last week, the bureau's weekly bulletin asserted, describing recent hot weather as "decidedly unfavorable" to crops.

"There will be little corn in most of the plains States, much of Missouri, parts of Iowa and in some areas east of the Mississippi River," the bulletin continued.

Farmers, it said, were everywhere giving up hope of a crop and making efforts to "salvage as much * * * as possible for fodder and roughage."

Water and feed for livestock were reported "increasingly scarce" with "forced movement of stock continued in many Western and central sections."

Expropriation Menaces Locals Backing Lewis

A. F. L.'s Power to Revoke Charters, Then to Seize Property Is Cited.

By Robert C. Albright.

Possibility that the American Federation of Labor may attempt to assert its legal powers to revoke charters and take over property of State or city locals alingning themselves with the "rebel" industrial union movement, was discussed here tonight in labor circles.

Attention was called to a provision in the American Federation of Labor constitution stipulating that funds and property of all kinds belonging to a member of the central labor body must be turned over to the federation upon revocation or suspension of its charter.

In recent weeks a number of central labor bodies, some of them owning valuable properties, have taken action condemning the A. F. of L.'s action in ordering suspension September 5 of the ten unions affiliated with the insurgent committee for industrial organization, headed by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers.

Although it was not believed these expressions alone, or praise meted out to the Lewis movement, would prompt the A. F. of L. to adopt penalizing tactics, it was pointed out any direct break toward the Lewis ranks could be followed by enforcement of the constitutional provision.

Lewis Off to Europe.

Lewis himself is now en route to Europe, his unheralded sailing prompting speculation on whether he was seeking to avoid any efforts that might be exerted by the Administration to patch over the rift in labor's ranks before the American Federation of Labor convention November 9, six days after the Presidential election. The mine leader, who led the split with the A. F. of L., is not expected to return until September 3, two days before the executive council order suspending the Lewis unions becomes effective.

Some Democratic politicos are said to feel prolongation of the labor rift would not help the party's cause in the November elections.

President William Green of the American Federation of Labor was not in Washington yesterday, but in one authoritative quarter it was said a reminder of the labor constitutional proviso might later be issued.

Provides Confiscation.

It was pointed out section 17 of article 13 of the constitution provides:

"Upon the dissolution, suspension or revocation of the charter of any local, trade or Federal labor union, central body or State branch, all funds and property of any character shall revert to the American Federation of Labor, to be held in trust until such time that the suspended or defunct organization may be reorganized and ready to confine its activities and action to conform with recognized enforceable laws of the American Federation of Labor. It shall further be the duty of the officers of the local or Federal labor union, or central body or State branch which has been dissolved or whose charter has been suspended or revoked, to deliver all funds and property to the President of the American Federation of Labor or a representative whom he may designate for that purpose."

Among the city central bodies which have forwarde dto Washington resolutions critical of the A. F. of L. executive council's action is the Chicago Federation of Labor. In the case of the Chicago union, however, an actual formal stand on the resolution was avoided by leaders. The resolution, unadopted, was merely forwarded to the executive council. The Chicago union maintains among other valuable holdings, a labor radio station, WCFL.

City Unions Back Lewis.

Some city central labor unions, however, in action welcomed by the C. I. O., have adopted formally resolutions assailing the executive council order and praising Lewis.

Listed by the C. I. O. as having gone on record as sympathetic are the Hudson County Central Labor Unions of New Jersey, the Allentown, Pa., Central Trades and Labor Council, the New Haven Central Labor Council, the Chattanooga Central Labor Unions, the San Francisco Central Labor Council and the Detroit and Wayne County Federation of Labor.

It was not thought likely any warning relative to the basic law would go out from the A. F. of L. before September 5, when the executive council's suspension rule becomes effective. The A. F. of L. is said to be on the alert for evidence of active efforts by the C. I. O. to win over allegiance of old-line member bodies.

Loyalists Use Slingshots.

New York WPA Denies 'Frauds' On Its Pay Roll

Head Says Reforms Based on Own Survey Ended 'Unearned' Wages.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 19.—New York City's Works Progress Administration followed up its own survey disclosing vacant lots among inaccurate addresses listed for 569 employes here by asserting today that no unearned wages have been paid anyone.

This was the answer of Col. Brehon B. Somervell, new administrator, to charges by Joseph W. Martin, jr., Republican eastern campaign manager, of "gross inefficiency" and "politics."

Col. Somervell said that reforms already had been made on the basis of the survey, begun last April, and that establishment of a permanent investigating unit to keep check on whether employes merit relief might be necessary.

Whether such a unit can be formed, however, may depend on the interpretation given President Roosevelt's order that all persons certified by the United States Employment Service "shall thereafter be considered as continually certified for assignment to work to be conducted by the Works Progress Administration."

WPA officials said the report disclosing fraudulent and inaccurate addresses was used as the basis for a reduction of 40,000 in WPA rolls on July 1.

The report, prepared by Col. William E. Hoyer and 20 investigators, showed 297 moved from addresses given during the last three years, 159 never lived at addresses given and 113 were not known at addresses.

The check was made upon 2,084 of the 244,000 on the rolls in April because they had been absent from work more than three days. A group of 386 were found to be ill and 135 had entered private employment without notifying the WPA.

Those who gave uninhabitable places as homes were dropped, WPA officials said. The places included vacant lots, playgrounds, a motion-picture theater and a library.

Describing the report as "ancient history," Col. Somervell said that to date 5,000 cases have been checked.

Navajo Chief Asks Land Restoration

Nee Alneeng, Ariz., Aug. 19 (AP).—Chee Dodge, last of the Navajo war chiefs and regarded as the most influential member of his tribe, told through an interpreter today of the Navajos' unsuccessful endeavor to extend their reservation's eastern boundary.

Testifying before the Senate subcommittee investigating proposed extension of the reservation, the aged tribal leader pleaded for return of the land he said is the Navajos' by tradition.

"My people," he said, "prefer raising sheep and other livestock to farming."

An uproar arose among the Indians present when Charlie Jesus protested that witnesses delegated by the tribal council to represent the Navajos have not been called.

Senator Elmer Thomas, committee chairman, assured him any witnesses he might suggest would be heard.

4 Convicted Slayers Escape Devils Island

Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, Aug. 19. (AP).—Four convicted murderers who escaped from Devils Island—French penal colony off Guiana—were set adrift today in the Caribbean Sea by the Trinidad government after a fortnight's refuge on this island.

The fugitives were given a new small boat and food to last three weeks before being towed out to sea 12 miles by a police launch. They waved goodbye to police and began rowing diligently toward Venezuela.

Madison, Wis., Aug. 19.—A unified National Farmer-Labor Party for the congressional campaign of 1938 and the Presidential campaign of 1940 was set today as the goal of the liberal parties of Minnesota and Wisconsin.

A statement of principle and program was issued by executives of the Farmer-Labor Association of Minnesota and the Farmer-Labor Progressive Federation of Wisconsin after representatives of the two groups had met in executive session here yesterday.

"We believe that the new national alignment must be established as soon as possible regardless of the fact that no unity of action can be reached in the Presidential campaign," the statement said.

It was decided that organization support would not be given to the new Union Party and its Presidential nominee, William Lemke.

The question of what course liberals will pursue in the present national campaign will be discussed at a meting in Chicago early in September. Gov. Floyd B. Olson, Minnesota Farmer-Laborite, agreed today to join United States Senator Robert M. La Follette, Wisconsin Progressive, in issuing the call for the Chicago meeting.

E. E. Irwin, general manager of the fair, estimated the crowd at 15,000 and answered East by saying many tickets had been sold to persons who wanted to see the harness racing program later in the afternoon, but weren't interested in listening to the Republicans.

Representative Richard J. Lyons, of Libertyville, stepped to the microphone to urge persons standing in the aisles to take seats on the grounds of "good sportsmanship."

State troopers than quit their efforts to help ushers guard the reserved seats, and the program finally got under way, officials taking their places 50 minutes after the scheduled time.

Chicago, Aug. 19 (AP).—The Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith, successor to the late Huey Long as head of the share-the-wealth movement, said today the scheduled appearance of Father Charles Coughlin at a New Orleans meeting, August 25, had been canceled because the Detroit radio priest was ordered by his physician to "take a rest." Smith said the meeting would be held in October.

Labor's Nonpartisan League yesterday made public a statement by Leslie Doud, its State chairman for Kansas, asserting that "in the Landon budget-balancing process the State's public schools have been left to shift for themselves."

The Pro-Roosevelt League said also that an official report by W. T. Markham, Kansas superintendent of public instruction, showed "worthless" bonds involving $132,750 are held in the State's permanent school fund. This, the league argued, casts "grave doubt" on "the extent to which the budget of the State of Kansas is balanced."

Markham has informed Gov. Alf M. Landon, the league said, that these bonds cannot be charged off the records of the school fund commission because of constitutional limitations.

Asserting the "sole issue" upon which Gov. Landon seeks the Presidency is that he has balanced the Kansas budget, Loud's statement added:

"Highways of the State are in the condition, for the great part, of a backwoods district of years ago, and the public school system is as provincial as it was in most of the Eastern States 50 and 60 years ago.

"In the Landon budget-balancing process the State's public schools have been left to shift for themselves The aid which the State extends to them is less than is extended by any other State in the Union, which, apart from the interest of the permanent school fund and dog taxes, is nothing"

Crowley described the banking situation there as "quite satisfactory," adding:

"The banks have some mortgages but it is not alarming. They have ample reserves for the most part. There may have to be some consolidations in the Dakotas but there is no reason why they should cause any uneasiness."

Hopkins said he expected to go along with the President on the trip to the drought belt.

Questioned as to how much the Government's drought relief program would cost, he remarked:

'Blue' Division Ready to Attack 'Red' Invaders

By Phillip Austensen.
A Staff Correspondent.

With the Twenty-ninth Division Blue Army, near Liekdale, Pa., Aug. 19.—Units of the famous Blue and Gray Division were moving into position tonight in preparation for a decisive battle with red forces in the morning.

The division is bivouacked on the east bank of Swatara Creek tonight awaiting orders to cross over and attack a slightly smaller body of the Red army, which is in a strong defensive position.

Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, commanding the Twenty-ninth, this afternoon received the following message from the Blue Army commander:

"Reliably informed that strong force of Red infantry and artillery moving on Swatara Gap now is marching on Indiantown Gap. Leading elements cannot reach Gap before 5 p. m. 20th. Attack Reds west of Swatara Creek, driving them to the southwest and prevent debouchment of Reds from Indiantown Gap and Swatara Gap until arrival of reinforcements on August 21."

Gen. Reckord ordered a crossing of the stream at 3 a. m. tomorrow and an attack at daybreak with the Ninety-first Infantry Brigade of Virginia on the right enveloping the Red left flank to drive them to the southwest. The Fifty-eighth Brigade of Infantry of Maryland will attack on the left, and after capturing the high ground in its front, is to pivot to the left and drive abreast of the Ninety-first toward the southwest.

Bridge Work Begun.

The 121st Engineer Regiment of Washington, commanded by Col. John W. Oehmann, has started work on construction of six Lampert and Kapok foot bridges for the passage of Infantry brigades. The bridges are to be completed at 3 a. m., the Infantry is to start moving across at 3:15 in preparation for the dawn attack.

The Engineers will guide the infantrymen to the bridges and superintend their passage to the attack positions.

The enemy is outlined by the special troops of the division, commanded by Maj. William T. Roy, who is acting as Red "general."

The 111th Artillery of Virginia will support the Ninety-first Brigade. The 110th of Maryland will support the Fifty-eighth Brigade. The 176th Pennsylvania Artillery Regiment will support the advance of both brigades.

The units of the division were moved to their bivouac positions by truck because Gen. Reckord felt that marching would be too hard on the men after the strenuous defense problem Monday and Tuesday. The division was enjoying a good laugh today on the famous Richmond Blues.

The Blues, commanded by Maj. Buford Rose, were falling back after covering the movement into defensive positions of the Ninety-first Brigade in the problem yesterday. As they contacted with the 116th Infantry, the latter body mistook them for enemy and opened fire. Shouts and yells that they were not enemy failed to halt the fire and finally the Blues were ordered by Maj. Rose to return the fire. The Blues advanced through the 116th and captured several prisoners whom they sent back to Col. Edwin P. Conquest, division intelligence officer, who was astounded when the men indignantly denied they were enemy soldiers.

Officers of the 116th later explained that they had understood the covering force in their orders was purely mythical and had not expected to find actual troops between themselves and the enemy. Difficulties in obtaining land for the maneuvers had forced the simulation of many of the movements in the order.

Regular Army instructors declined to decide the controversy over whether the Reds or the Blues "won the war" in the battle between the Red armored car forces and the Blues at the critic session last night. They declared that the division had acquitted itself well in general despite many errors of commission and omission due largely to the fact that the units of the division have not trained together since the World War and heretofore have had much theoretical work mixed up with their maneuvers.

Extensive preparations are being made for the expected influx of visitors Friday for the review of the division by Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff of the Army, and other prominent Army officers and civilians. The review will be held at 11 a. m.

Virginian Held in Bail In Threat to President

Philadelphia, Aug. 19 (AP).—U. S. Commissioner William S. Wacker held John A. Bartenback, 45, in $25,000 bail today on charges he sent threatening letters to President Roosevelt.

Secret Service agents brought the charges against Bartenback after he appeared in police headquarters to identify men suspected of taking articles from a small boat he owned. He said he was from Cobbs Creek, Va.

and there gave but "more or less relief."

The plains area through which President Roosevelt's drought relief committee was passing was described as hardest hit because of continuous heat for weeks.

Increasing requests for movement of livestock came from farmers in Iowa despite showers in that State. The Interstate Commerce Commission in Washington ordered a 25 per cent cut in railroad rates on cattle shipments from Oklahoma and Kansas to Texas.

"Not Bad as Expected."

Scott City, Kans., Aug. 19 (AP).—The President's drought commission came out of the dust bowl today with the terse declaration, "things are not so bad as we had expected."

As the Government men—studying first-hand the drought conditions in the Plains States—reached Scott City after a hot, dusty trip from Lamar, Colo., John C. Page, acting commissioner of reclamation and a member of the commission, remarked:

"Baca County, Colo., is well known in Washington as the capital of the dust bowl—but things do not appear so bad as we had expected."

Yesterday the commission, headed by Chairman Morris L. Cooke and with Rexford G. Tugwell, Undersecretary of Agriculture, as a member, encountered its first dust storm since the drought tour began at Amarillo, Tex., several days ago.

As the members drove through the Oklahoma Panhandle and into Colorado a light "duster" swept across the fields near Lamar. A rain washed the skies clear later.

Wheat Crop "Fair."

There was evidence of what some members described as "fair" wheat crops along the route of today's itinerary.

Tugwell, Resettlement Administrator, apparently brought surprise and consternation to some farmers when he stopped to view first hand the progress of a Colorado Resettlement project.

He said one farmer to whom the Administrator introduced himself asked:

"What's the matter, have I done something wrong?"

Page commented that apparently "the dry-farm areas are not irrigation conscious."

He said his attention was attracted to numerous sections where substantial garden and truck crops probably could have been produced with the aid of a few irrigation wells.

More than 100 farmers and merchants met the commission here and divided into small groups to discuss drought problems with the members.

From Scott City the commission moved on to McCook, Nebr., for an overnight stop. Because the group is slightly behind schedule no side trips off the regular itinerary were made today.

Ford Dances, Gives Children a Treat

Pequaming, Mich., Aug. 19 (AP).—Henry Ford danced the minuet and Virginia reel for a half hour with children in a Pequaming dancing school, then departed leaving orders that all the village youngsters be treated to ice cream and cake.

The unexpected visit from the motor magnate, whose summer home is in the nearby Huron mountains on Lake Superior occurred Monday, but the little girls who were his partners in the dances still were talking about it tonight.

Ford has built schools here especially adapted to his ideas of vocational training. Teaching of old-fashioned dances is a part of their program.

He arrived unannounced on the tug "Barlow" and went immediately to the dancing school, where four classes were in progress. He paired with a little girl for a graceful minuet, then suggested the Virginia reel, in which, with another small partner, he led one of the groups.

Main Break Cuts Low Water Supply

The water shortage in Falls Church, Va., became more acute for a few hours yesterday afternoon when gas company workers accidentally broke one of the town's chief water mains.

Because of the drought, Falls Church firemen have been pumping water from Arlington mains into the Falls Church system.

The broken main was repaired as quickly as possible and the supply was returned to the area affected just in time for housewives to serve a later supper.

State Calls 8 As Trial Opens In Co-Ed Death

Hall-Boy's Attorney Says He Will Charge Duress Forced Confession.

By the Associated Press.

Asheville, N. C., Aug. 19.—Eight witnesses testified today in Superior Court as the prosecution began weaving the web it hopes will send Martin Moore to the gas chamber for slaying Helen Clevenger, New York University student, in a hotel room here July 16.

Most of today's testimony merely established the circumstances of death, leaving until tomorrow efforts of Solicitor Zeb V. Nettles to get into the record a confession, which Sheriff Laurence E. Brown said the tall colored boy made when arrested ten days ago.

J. Scroop Styles, court-appointed defense lawyer, told newsmen the defense would challenge the document, claiming it to have been obtained under duress, that leniency was promised and that the defendant was not legally under arrest when he signed it.

Styles created a flurry when he asked to be relieved after Sanford W. Brown, another Asheville attorney, announced he had been retained by Moore's sister. The court appointed Styles and Thomas A. Jones, jr., last week when the defendant was represented as without funds to employ counsel.

Judge Phillips admitted Brown to defense counsel and induced Styles and Jones to continue.

Clevenger on Stand.

Opening State witnesses were:

Prof. W. L. Clevenger, rotund North Carolina State College dairy specialist, with whom his niece, 19-year-old Helen, was traveling, who told of finding her shot and battered body in her room at the Battery Park Hotel.

A. H. (Slim) Tomberlin, carpenter, who exhibited a miniature design of the hotel floor and pointed out to the jury the position of the body, clad in striped green pajamas, inside her room door.

Harry Laetsche, gray-haired hotel carpenter, whom Prof. Clevenger first called after he had discovered his niece's body.

Pat Branch, 65-year-old bespectacled hotel manager.

Dr. David Buck, the hotel physician, who testified the girl was dead when he examined her about 8:45 o'clock.

Dr. Howard L. Sumner, county health officer, who exhibited a photograph of the head and shoulders of Miss Clevenger taken at a mortuary.

Defendant Indifferent.

E. M. Ball, the photographer who made the pictures.

The 6-foot 3-inch defendant gave little attention to the morning session during jury selections, nor to the afternoon testimony.

"Would it be possible," Jones asked Manager Branch under cross-examination, "for a person to conceal himself in the hotel without registering?"

"It might be possible," Branch answered.

"Do you know Martin Moore?"

"Yes."

"Is his character generally good?" Jones asked.

"Yes," Branch replied.

Solicitor Nettles immediately re-examined Branch, asking in a heated tone:

"I'll ask if you're not giving Martin Moore a good character because you're afraid the hotel is to be named defendant in a civil action?"

"No," the ruddy-faced hotel manager replied with a chuckle.

E. F. Zalesak, club president, announced initiation of Arley Ray Unger, editor of the Prince Georges Post, as a member of the club.

Gas, Cave-ins Menace Rescue Of Four in Mine

By the Associated Press.

Moberly, Mo., Aug. 19.—Doggedly fighting the double-edged menace of gas and cave-in, weary coal miners bored through a debris-littered shaft tonight toward four fellow workers, trapped for more than 24 hours behind a collapsed tunnel, 100 feet below the surface.

"We're going to stay on the job," declared State Mine Inspector Arnold Griffith. Veteran miners doubted if the men had survived their day and night of entombment.

Twice deadly black damp—gas that lurks in coal mines when air circulation is blocked—drove rescue crews to the surface after they had worked their way down a water-blocked air vent to the debris-locked bottom of the main shaft.

A report late today said another fire—similar to the one which preceded yesterday's collapse—had broken out beneath the surface, but Griffith said he believed the flames were under control.

Griffith, who led one of the rescue crews, said he did not expect the main shaft to be cleared for several hours.

Incineration Proposed.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 19.—Told that the city dump will soon have to be abandoned, because it has nearly reached the limit of capacity, the City Council is considering plans for an incinerator system for the disposal of garbage and rubbish.

'Frisco Judge Drops Hewitt Mayhem Case

Evil Motives Not Proven in Sterilization Operation, He Holds.

San Francisco, Aug. 19.—Superior Judge Raglan C. Tuttle today dismissed the case of Drs. Tilton E. Tillman and Samuel G. Boyd, on trial for mayhem for the sterilization of Ann Cooper Hewitt, young heiress.

Judge Tuttle held the prosecution had failed to establish a case against the defendants and declared sterilization is not prohibited under California laws.

Miss Hewitt's mother, Mrs. Maryon Cooper Hewitt, and the young woman's guardians had consented to the operation, Judge Tuttle declared.

"If in giving the consent the mother had evil or ulterior motives, such facts were not proven in any degree and there was no proof whatever the defendants were acting in bad faith," the ruling stated.

"The court holds, therefore, the prosecution has failed to make out a case against the defendants and is of the opinion that further continuance of the trial would entail a useless expenditure of public funds as a verdict of conviction would necessarily have to be set aside.

"It is therefore ordered that the action and all counts thereunder be dismissed."

Miss Hewitt's attorney declared it was a "terrible decision" and added he would take steps to appeal the ruling.

"The decision is all wrong," he stated. "This case should have gone to the jury. I acted in the interests of the youth of California and it is a terrible decision. It is establishing a dangerous precedent.

U. S. Revenue In July Gains $66,728,906

By the Associated Press.

A jump of $66,728,906 in internal revenue collections for the first month of the fiscal year as compared with the same period last year was reported yesterday by the Treasury with some items showing increases of several hundred per cent.

The total rose from $221,597,633 in July of last year to $288,326,539 in the same month this year, or almost 30 per cent. All the major categories registered gains, ranging from $12,752,211 for liquors to $36,931,477 for miscellaneous.

The report was of special interest in view of the statement by Secretary Morgenthau last week that no new taxes would be asked at the next session of Congress.

Based on Prospects.

Morgenthau said at the time, however, that his estimate was based on future prospects more than on actual collections.

The Treasury report showed that corporation income taxes more than doubled, rising from $14,364,533 to $29,085,623. Individual income-tax payments rose from $9,598,915 to $11,052,514. Excess profits collections gained from $174,319 to $1,048,377.

Estate taxes increased from $14,024,356 to $29,014,452, while gift taxes jumped from $96,766 to $327,213.

4 Are Identified As Bandits Here

Four youths of ages ranging from 17 to 20, who were arrested earlier in the week at North Beach, Md., were identified at police line-up last night by Cecil Steinecke, local gasoline station manager, as the bandits who recently held up his establishment, struck him on the head with a bottle and made off with $58.

Three of the four were further identified by James Williams of West River, Md., as having participated in a hold-up of his cottage in that town earlier in the summer.

The police will hold another line-up tomorrow night and Inspector B. W. Thompson, chief of detectives, has requested that all victims of hold-ups by white men attend and attempt to identify their assailants.

Efforts to Settle Seattle Newspaper Strike Fail

Seattle, Aug. 19 (AP).—Harvey J. Kelly, general labor counsel for Hearst newspapers, announced tonight three unions under contract to the strike-suspended Post-Intelligencer have protested the Seattle Central Labor Council's action in listing the publication as "unfair."

Projected conciliation attempts failed temporarily, meanwhile, in a walkout called by the Seattle chapter of the American Newspaper Guild. The paper has not published since the strike was called six days ago.

Rites Set Today For Mrs. Kaufman

Funeral services for Mrs. Hannah Kaufman, mother of Dr. Harry M. Kaufman, chief of the medical staff of Emergency Hospital, will be held at 10 a. m. today at the funeral parlors of Joseph Gawler Sons. Burial will be in Washington Hebrew Congregation Cemetery.

Mrs. Kaufman, who was 86, was injured in a three-car collision Tuesday on the Baltimore boulevard near College Park, Md. Taken to Emergency Hospital, she died three hours later.

A native of Germany, Mrs. Kaufman arrived in Baltimore when she was 6 months old. She was the widow of Marx Kaufman, Washington merchant. She had been ill for several months and was taking her first trip to her former home city since her illness when the accident occurred.

She is survived, besides Dr. Kaufman, by a daughter, Mrs. Sol W. Bloom, of Charleston, W. Va., who was injured slightly in the accident, and another son, Milton Kaufman, with whom she had been living at 2415 Twentieth street. Joseph D. ("Radio Joe") Kaufman is her nephew.

First Lady Scolded On Road by Driver

Ridgefield, Conn., Aug. 19 (AP).—Francis J. Bassett, Ridgefield High School economics teacher and member of the Democratic town committee, told today with embarrassment how he ordered Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the President, off the road.

Tuesday in the Wilton road, Bassett related, his progress was impeded by a machine driving slowly in front of him.

Bassett admitted he shouted "get off the road." As the car pulled over and stopped Bassett left his machine planning to remonstrate but changed his mind when he saw Mrs. Roosevelt at the car window.

Bassett's next remark, he said, was "oh, please excuse me."

As he regained his own car he heard:

"That's all right, young man."

Police Arrest Vagrants In Chicago Death Case

Chicago, Aug. 19 (AP).—Bent upon preventing the possibility of further crimes of violence such as the hotel killing Saturday of Mrs. Mary Louise Trammell, 24, former Knoxville, Tenn., stenographer, the Chicago police today began rounding up all loiterers found in parks and the Loop.

More than 100 men, 50 of them colored, were taken into custody. Many were finger-printed. Meanwhile police investigators said they hoped by intensive questioning of Rufo Swain, 27-year-old scar-faced colored man, to determine whether he committed at least one other of Chicago's recent hotel killings—that of Mrs. Florence Thompson Castle.

Mrs. Castle, 24, a night club beauty, was slain in much the same manner as Mrs. Trammell, to whose killing Capt. Daniel Gilbert, of the State's attorney's police, said Swain confessed.

Police Arrest D. C. Man On Bad Check Charge

Reed was arrested by Detective Sergts. Robert Bryant and Thomas Sullivan. He was charged with obtaining money under false pretenses.

WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT FACE PIMPLES

These disfiguring little spots often result from a slight, temporary disturbance, or merely from incorrect cleansing, or sometimes they are more persistent due to deeper internal causes.

While properly treating the underlying cause, you can relieve the itchy, burning soreness and help your skin by using an ointment that will keep the medication in contact with the pimply spots. Apply it every night and leave it on all night. It does a world of good.

For more than 40 years people have used Resinol Ointment to fill this need. It soothes the irritation and aids healing. It also treats the oil pores where many surface pimples start. Washing first with Resinol Soap quickens the pleasing results.

Buy a jar of Resinol Ointment and cake of Resinol Soap from any druggist. For free sample write Resinol, Dept. 10, Baltimore, Md.

Tobacco Futile, Cakes End Strike

Akron, Ohio, Aug. 19 (AP).—The appeal of old-fashioned pancakes triumphed today over nicotine, settling a "sit-down" strike among tobacco-chewing residents of the Summit County Home for the Aged.

The protestant bloc, vexed at a 50 per cent curtailment in tobacco rations, inaugurated a "sit-down" in the home's laundry and fields yesterday.

"Give us pancakes and you can cut the tobacco supply."

So this morning pancakes—tall stacks of them—adorned the breakfast tables for the first time, said Chef Paul Graham, within memory of residents.

The cakes brought a change in the chewers' attitude, said Weygandt, and they are back on 50 per cent tobacco rations, prompted by reduced finanical aid under a new State relief law.

U. S. Seed Plan Cost Estimated At $10,000,000

Grain Will Be Purchased at Once for Resale to Farmers in Spring.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Aug. 19.—Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace said at a press conference here late today that the Federal Government would spend $10,000,000 immediately to buy grain seed to be sold back to the farmers in the drought area next spring.

Wallace said the money was obtained through the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation and would be spent immediately in buying wheat, barley and rye seed from "co-ops and individual companies."

The seed will be stored in the Northwest until next spring and then "will be made available directly to farmers in the drought area," he said.

To Shut Out Speculators.

Milo R. Perkins, executive assistant to the Secretary, said this would shut out speculators and "hold grain closer to the farm."

Wallace said the wheat situation was not "as desperate as people sometimes think."

Asked if the drought would affect city food prices, he said:

"Very little, if at all. Generally speaking, food prices do not seem to fluctuate because of crops from year to year."

The Secretary delivered an address today on a visit to the Great Lakes Exposition here.

"The reactionaries' cry, 'you cannot regiment nature,' while true enough, is the cry of little men lost in primitive superstition," Wallace said.

Foresaw Nature's Whims.

"Joseph (of the Old Testament) had a bigger vision than they. He didn't regiment nature, but he did prepare for the whims of nature."

"Before punishing farmers," he said, "it would seem the Lord should visit his wrath upon those industrialists who felt compelled to cut production to one-half or even one-fourth of normal in 1932, thereby plowing millions of workers onto the streets and creating the most intense scarcity this Nation has ever seen."

Wallace received a military welcome on his arrival. A company of infantry discovered at the eleventh hour they had assembled at the wrong railroad station, but rushed to the right terminal in time to greet the Secretary.

2 Speeders Sentenced To Sit in Wrecked Car

Jacksonville, Fla., Aug. 19 (AP).—Two men arrested for speeding sat one hour each today in a badly wrecked automobile in which four persons recently were killed.

"See for yourselves what fast driving often results in," Judge I. Muncy Anderson told A. L. Chancey and H. A. Clarke as he sentenced them to pay $10 fines and meditate on speed for one hour in the death car.

Conservation Test In Dakota Widened

Bismark, N. Dak., Aug. 19 (AP).—A North Dakota experiment begun more than a year ago to conserve water and preserve wild life has been broadened to include other States and partly fulfill the dreams of pioneer conservationists in drought areas.

The new program, financed with $500,000 by the Federal Biological Survey, is designed particularly for the Dakotas, Montana, Nebraska and Wyoming.

It has a triple purpose, water conservation, wild life preservation and work for destitute farmers, M. O. Steen, regional administrator in charge of the work, said.

A new type of project was begun as an experiment in North Dakota more than a year ago. Areas upon which water could be stored through dams or diversion of escaping waters were obtained from private owners as work project sites.

Relief clients were assigned and construction work carried out. This program now will be expanded in North Dakota and other States in this area lacking adequate water supply and natural wild life protection.

Suspect Is Grilled In '33 Murder of 4

Richmond, Va., Aug. 19 (AP).—Sheriff C. O. Mullins, of Mecklenburg County, tonight said John D. Cannon, 36-year-old colored mechanic, of Mount Holly, N. J., was being held in Henrico County jail for questioning in connection with the murder of four white men on an isolated farm near Lacrosse, March 31, 1933.

Cannon was arrested in Mecklenburg County August 7 on a "bad check" charge brought by W. Henry Cook, South Hill lawyer.

Commonwealth's Attorney F. C. Bedinger said the man was being held purely for investigation. Connon remained "unshaken," the prosecutor said, during prolonged questioning today.

The four men slain in 1933 were Ben L. Cannon, 77, and Willis Cannon, 82, brothers, and Thomas W. Cannon, 56, and William Cannon, 29, nephews of the older men.

Repeal to Be Topic.

Isaac Gens, of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, will discuss "The Social Effect of Repeal" tonight before the Maryland Distillers and Rectifiers Association at the Hillendale Club, Baltimore.

R. J. Reynolds' Daughter Gets Share in Estate

Mrs. Babcock Takes Control of $30,000,000 on Her 28th Birthday.

By the Associated Press.

Winston-Salem, N. C., Aug. 19.—The Twin City Sentinel said today that Mrs. Reynolds Babcock, daughter of the late R. J. Reynolds, had passed her twenty-eighth birthday and come into full control of her estimated $30,000,000 share of his tobacco fortune.

The Sentinel said that, although no formal announcement had been made, Mrs. Babcock, who now lives in Connecticut, had taken over control of her share of the estate which was administered until her birthday on August 8, by the Safe Deposit Co. of Baltimore.

The will of the founder of the Reynolds Tobacco Co. provided that his children should not gain control of their shares of his great wealth until they reached 28.

The inheritance which came to Mrs. Babcock, the paper said, is apart from the estate of her mother, Mrs. Katherine-Reynolds-Johnson, from which Mrs. Babcock received a life income.

Mrs. Babcock was married about six years ago to Charles H. Babcock, jr., New York employe, and they reside with their two children at Greenwich, Conn.

She is the second of the wealthy Reynoldses to receive a portion of the estate. R. J. Reynolds, jr., oldest child, came into his inheritance about two years ago. Nancy Reynolds Bagley, second girl of the family, will be 28 in 1938.

Battered Bandits Freed; 'Victim' Was Ex-Boxer

Chicago, Aug. 19 (AP).—Grant Fortney, 23, a former pugilist, today took two good looks at the battered faces of two men he accused of having tried to hold him up ten days ago and said to Judge Jay Schiller of felony court:

"They've had enough, your honor. Please turn them loose."

"Didn't they try to hold you up?" asked the judge.

"Yes," said Fortney, glancing at their black eyes, "but they made a mistake in picking on me."

The prisoners, who gave the names of Frank Walsh, 25, and Walter Graham, 26, were freed for want of prosecution.

ELLSWORTH FARR.

Delay Granted Robert H. Ickes

Woburn, Mass., Aug. 19 (U.P.).—Pleading not guilty to a drunken driving charge, Robert H. Ickes, 23-year-old adopted son of Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes, gained continuance of his case until Tuesday when he appeared in district court today.

Young Ickes was represented by Attorney Francis P. Mullen, whose daughter is social secretary to Gov. James M. Curley's daughter, Mrs. Mary Curley Donnelly.

A WPA clerk, young Ickes was summoned as result of a minor automobile mishap in nearby Winchester August 11. Police have denied charges of the Secretary of Interior that the action against his foster son was a "political maneuver."

Farmer on Watch, 'Bags' an Intruder

Citizens who dwell in the vicinity of 3449 Benning road northeast, were agitated last night to hear an injured voice declaiming, "Oh, my God! I'm shot."

On investigation these citizens discovered the voice emanated from one Donald Shock, 35, of Baltimore. Shock was indeed injured. In fact he was full of buckshot fired from the double-barreled shotgun of Ellsworth Farr, 74, truck farmer who resides at the above address.

Four years ago Farr was held up. Since that sad day he has kept his trusty 12-gauge gun under his bed.

Recently Farr has observed the periodic disappearance of some of his chickens. He awaited the day of revenge. Last night it arrived. He heard strange noises and discovered they were being created by two men attempting to enter his dwelling without ringing the doorbell. Farr let fly with the left barrel. Shock, from his bed in Gallinger Hospital, is witness to a direct hit. Farr tried for the other visitor with his right barrel. Police think Farr winged him and have notified all hospitals and doctors to be on the look-out for a prospective patient. Shock will be charged with housebreaking.

Traffic Violator Pays, Catches Thief in Car

Carl J. Walters, colored, of 1508 B street northeast, went around to the police station last night to pay a traffic fine. Upon his departure he discovered another colored man busy in his car. He called attention to this fact, and a flying squad of police debouched upon one James A. Lawrence, who said he is 21 and hails from Nashville.

Upon investigation Lawrence's pockets proved to be stuffed with sundry paraphernalia, all of which was identified and claimed by Waiters. Lawrence was booked on a charge of petty larceny.

Mother Restrained.

Railway Lines Planning Study Of Unification

Major Companies to Seek to Increase Efficiency, Effect Economy.

By the Associated Press.

The Nation's major railroads are setting up machinery of their own to explore the field of co-ordination and unification, in which authority for Government studies expired June 16.

Officials of the Association of American Railroads, which represents class one roads, disclosed yesterday that regional co-ordinating committees similar to those formerly maintained under a Government plan are being organized by the carriers.

They said that a committee for the East, composed of the presidents of all major roads in this territory, already had been formed and that groups for the West and South probably would be organized soon.

These committees, it was added, will investigate possibilities for co-ordinations, consolidations and unifications to effect economies and increase efficiency.

After the regional committees make reports to the association, the association may make recommendations for putting suggestions into effect.

Under an agreement between railroad management and labor, effected at the request of President Roosevelt, a system of "dismissal compensation" already has been set up. Under this, employes thrown out of work in consolidation projects would continue to receive partial compensation, based upon their past salaries and length of service.

A three-year-old Government program of railroad co-ordination, headed by Joseph B. Eastman, member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, expired June 16 after Congress failed to appropriate funds for its continuance.

Eastman has returned to his duties with the commission, but a small force is now working under his direction to finish several co-ordination studies. The workers have received no compensation since June 16, but efforts are being made to effect some arrangement under which they can be paid.

Eastman's never-used authority to compel unifications expired along with authority for his co-ordination and unification studies.

Paroled Murderess Asks Right to 'Dodge Curious'

San Diego, Calif., Aug. 19 (AP).—Sheriff Ernest Dort said today Clara Phillips, paroled hammer murderess, had asked permission to move to Texas so she could continue her work as a dentist "unmolested by curious crowds."

The sheriff said she told the State parole board she was unable to obtain work in her profession here.

Convicted of murdering Alberta Meadows with a hammer in Los Angeles, Mrs. Phillips was paroled from Tehachapi State Prison for Women last fall after serving 12 years of a life sentence.

She has been nursing her mother, who has been critically ill.

Farley Assails G. O. P.

no danger of bankruptcy and that he was "disgusted with this constant talk about balancing the budget." On the second charge, he quoted former Gov. Groesbeck as saying "this talk about the Constitution being endangered is pure bunk."

"When we examine the Republican case," Farley continued, "we find nothing but two scare stories, both of which disappear in the light of hard facts."

Turning to President Roosevelt's record, the Democratic leader declared "he has brought this country from a condition of business stagnation and paralysis to a high level of prosperity and happiness for all sections and all classes."

Citing a recent statement from the United States Chamber of Commerce that 1936 would be the best year in business since 1929, Farley said the only persons who did not credit the New Deal with bringing about recovery were those in "the relatively small group that has benefitted most."

"It was because we had a man at the head of our country who dared put the props under the tottering structure of business, which only the Federal Government could supply, that business was able to continue," he declared after describing conditions in 1932.

"It was only because Government assumed the burden of keeping the workless millions of our population alive that rioting, if not revolution, was averted."

Farley described Gov. Alf M. Landon as "a gentleman who is doubtless well-intentioned himself, but is being backed by the very interests which seek to break down the machinery that has brought us out of a nightmare of doubt and distress to at least a measure of confidence and economic security."

Of Col. Frank Knox, the Republican Vice Presidential nominee, he said:

Cites Detroit as Example.

"I am aware of the fact that while Gov. Landon is maintaining a policy of strict silence on campaign issues, his running mate, Col. Knox, is galloping about the country warning the people that they are in peril. Almost nightly he thunders forth a denunciation of the Roosevelt farm relief program and other policies to which Gov. Landon had given his hearty approval. A mere disagreement with his running mate apparently does not disturb the colonel.

Col. Knox had his inning as an adviser to the American people on economic affairs when he took his seat at the council table of former President Hoover. I know the people do not care to repeat that experience.

Pointing to the recovery of the automobile industry, Farley said "I do not suppose there is any American city that has leaped from the depth of depression to a comfortable level of prosperity more definitely and to a greater extent than Detroit. * * *

"However, what is true of that great Michigan city is equally true of every industrial community between the oceans. For that reason the story I am now telling is just as applicable to Bridgeport, Conn., for example, or Pittsburgh, South Bend, Chicago or any other great manufacturing and industrial metropolis, as it is to Detroit.

"Each one of these great manufacturing centers was flat on its back a little over three years ago and each one of them is today alert, alive and full of the thrill that goes with renewed activity and the happy prospect of still greater prosperity."

"Gov. Landon's supporters," he charged, "are attempting to alarm the consuming public and particularly the housekeepers with a wild story regarding the prices of food, etc.

"Among the other items I have seen recently in some of the Republican propaganda bulletins is that a pound of lamb chops, priced at 35 cents, had 17 cents taxes, making the total selling price 52 cents a pound.

Blames G. O. P. Headquarters.

"These cooked-up price lists are being put out by the Republican headquarters in Chicago, presumably in co-operation with the Chicago meat packers. They were formulated by the Republican brain trust, there, under the direction of a high-powered advertising salesman."

"* * * There is no disclosure of how the 17 cents of taxes is calculated. * * * The only Federal taxes that could apply are the income taxes.

"In the case of the butcher * * * this would give us the increase in the cost of the lamb chop in labor over what was in 1932 or 1933 a fraction of a cent so small that the statisticians have not been able to arrive as yet at the minute figure.

"Presumably, in order to get 17 cents of taxes everything from the butcher's license fee to the tag on the family dog must have been counted in.

"With such items, of course, the Administration at Washington has no more to do than it has with the velocity of the wind in Chicago."

4 Major Tours Now Proposed In Landon Race

Added Journey Mentioned by Aids Would Cover Mountain States.

By the Associated Press.

Estes Park, Colo., Aug. 19.—A Presidential campaign of at least four major tours was discussed by Republican advisers tonight as Gov. Alf M. Landon prepared for his initial anti-New Deal drive into Eastern voting areas.

The first swing starting by train from La Salle, Colo., at 10:20 a. m. (12:20 a. m. Eastern standard time) tomorrow, carries the Republican nominee through eight States and embraces three speeches and half a hundred rear platform appearances.

The second, Landon told reporters, will concentrate on the Middle Western farm belt. For the last, party leaders said an Eastern trip has been proposed to include a New York City speech October 29.

Rocky Mountain Trip.

The fourth tour mentioned by some aids today would cover Rocky Mountain territory and take place somewhere between the farm State and last Eastern trips.

In the case of all the last three, exact dates and itineraries still were under consideration.

Advisers said the program might be enlarged or shortened, depending on campaign developments.

For the farm belt swing, officials said such States as Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana and Minnesota were under consideration, with a possibility that Milwaukee, Minneapolis and Des Moines might be chosen for addresses.

Landon spent the last day of his week's visit to his summer ranch, 8 miles from here, working on his Eastern speeches and getting in readiness for an early start on the 50-mile motor trip to La Salle.

The talk he will deliver at Chautauqua, N. Y., Monday night, has been completed several days. Assistants said tonight his West Middlesex (Pa.) speech for Saturday afternoon and the Buffalo address for Wednesday night were in final form.

From the La Salle start, the Landon special train of nine cars will travel through to Omaha, Nebr., for an overnight stay and a breakfast conference Friday with State party leaders. The longest rear platform stop scheduled for the first day is 15 minutes at Grand Island, Nebr.

Mrs. Landon and the Governor's children plan to remain at the ranch until mid-September and then return to Topeka, Kans. Advisers thought it likely she would make at least the final Eastern swing with her husband.

Tydings to Aid The President, He Tells Farley

Maryland Senator Reserves Right of Opposition to Policies, However.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 19.—Democratic Chairman James A. Farley received assurances today from Senator Millard E. Tydings, of Maryland, a frequent critic of New Deal legislation, that he would do all he could "to assure the re-election of President Roosevelt."

Tydings said, however, that "after President Roosevelt is re-elected, and his Administration promulgates policies which I cannot honestly support, I will again oppose them."

He made his statement at Farley's press conference after he had discussed the campaign with the national chairman.

The only fair way to judge an administration," he stated, "is to judge it as a whole. Any fair estimate of the Roosevelt Administration as a whole shows it has been exceedingly good for the country."

He said he believed "Maryland will repeat in 1936 the adherence to the Democratic column it gave in 1932."

Leaders from Oklahoma, Florida, Montana and Texas also gave Farley optimistic reports at the sixth of a series of group conferences which will bring leaders from every State to national headquarters before the end of this month.

Those attending the conference included Senator James E. Murray, of Montana; Roy Miller, Democratic campaign manager in Texas; Sam Battles, Oklahoma State chairman; Representative Josh Lee of Oklahoma, the Democratic nominee for the Senate; Mrs. John Catlett, national committeewoman for Oklahoma; Mrs. J. E. Falkenburg, Oklahoma vice chairman; H. H. Wells, national committeeman for Florida; Mrs. Hortense K. Wells, national committeewoman for Florida; James B. Hodges, Florida State chairman, and Mrs. B. H. Hannah, Florida vice chairman.

Scientists Unearth Southwest Relics

Philadelphia, Aug. 19 (AP).—Archeologists under direction of Dr. Edgar B. Howard have uncovered evidence of an ancient uncivilized people in a prehistoric lake bed near Clovis, N. Mex., the University of Pennsylvania Museum said today.

Dr. J. Alden Mason, of the museum, said Dr. Howard's discoveries dated back "possibly very close to the glacial period."

He said that the actual times in years was a matter for geologists, but that "expert estimates placed the date approximately 8,000 to 10,000 years ago."

The specimens uncovered at Clovis were those of "a very ancient, uncivilized, hunting people who lived in New Mexico and Arizona."

The finds were chiefly spear and arrow heads. They were found with skeletal remains of extinct species of bison, mammoths, horses and camels.

Carey Outdistances Townsendite Foe

Cheyenne, Wyo., Aug. 19 (AP).—Townsend indorsed candidates were outdistanced today in returns from yesterday's primary election in which Senator Robert D. Carey won the Republican senatorial nomination.

Unofficial returns from 538 of the State's 676 precincts gave Carey 21,247 votes to 8,290 for A. F. Brubaker, Glenrock rancher, indorsed by the Wyoming Townsend old-age pension organization.

Brubaker's son, E. L. Brubaker, also approved by Townsend followers, trailed Frank A. Barrett, Lusk attorney, 10,873 to 17,204 in returns from 525 precincts for the Republican nomination for Representative.

Returns from 536 precincts in the five-way scramble for the Democratic senatorial nomination gave H. H. Schwartz, State senator, of Casper, 10,000 votes, and his nearest opponent, Dr. John D. Clark, Cheyenne, 6,509.

Representative Paul R. Greever, Cody, was unopposed for the Democratic nomination to succeed himself.

Franco-Polish Accord.

Paris, Aug. 19 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Marie Gustave Gamelin, chief of the army general staff, today returned from Poland, and the French press declared he had "revived military accords which were the basis of the Franco-Polish entente." Premier Leon Blum also returned from a brief holiday.

Workers Accuse Unions, Company

Cleveland, Aug. 19 (AP).—Steel workers asserted today both the Republic Steel Corporation and union organizers had used influence to force them to take a stand in the unionization drive.

Employes of the Republic's plant at Canton petitioned Gov. Martin L. Davey for "the protection we require to pursue our work in a peaceful manner," and said, "our experience with outside labor organizations has been that various methods of intimidation and coercion are used in securing members."

J. B. Damich, representative of the steel workers' industrial organization committee, asserted employes of the Republic's Cleveland plant had complained to him they had been threatened with loss of their jobs unless they signed a petition against the industrial organization plan.

This was denied by John N. May, general committee chairman of employe representatives of the Cleveland plant, who said "practically every man" signed the petition "without opposition."

Alexandria G.O.P. Hears NewDeal Foe

More than 200 members of the Young Republican Club of Alexandria met last night in Gadsby's Tavern and heard J. Caton Randall, Alexandria attorney, who described himself as a life-long Democrat who intended to vote for Landon, bitterly attack the Democratic Administration and President Roosevelt on the ground they are seeking to undermine the Constitution.

Randall cited the occasion when the President urged passage of the Guffey bill regardless of any doubts Congressmen might entertain concerning its constitutionality. He called attention to the recent meeting of anti-Administration Democrats in Detroit, sponsored by former Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, and stated that a similar meeting for dissident Virginia Democrats would be held in the John Marshall Hotel in Richmond tomorrow.

Others who spoke were John Locke Green, of Clarendon, candidate for the House of Representatives from the Eighth Virginia Congressional District; Henry A. Wise, Republican national committeeman from Virginia.

Inquest to Be Held In Death of Girl

An inquest into the death of Helen Berger, colored, 22, who was electrocuted Saturday while swimming in the Banneker Pool, Georgia avenue and Euclid street northwest, will be held next Monday, Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said yesterday.

Dr. MacDonald said the inquest has been held up awaiting a report from the District electrical engineer's office. The report will be brought out the hearing, he said.

The girl died instantly when she came into contact with a submerged lighting fixture.

Hauptmann's Widow Settles Tax on Estate

Compromises Dispute With U. S. Treasury Aids for $1,897.26.

By the Associated Press.

A compromise settlement of income tax differences between the Government and the estate of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, the German carpenter executed for kidnaping Charles A. Lindbergh, jr., was disclosed yesterday at the Board of Tax Appeals.

The Government and Mrs. Anna Hauptmann, as executrix of her husband's estate, agreed upon a payment of $1,897.26 in settlement of the Treasury's claims for $9,678.30.

The Treasury had sought the larger sum as deficiencies, penalties and interest due on Hauptmann's income tax returns for 1932 and 1933.

The $50,000 Lindbergh ransom was paid in April, 1932, and the baby's kidnaper eluded capture throughout 1933.

Agreed on August.

After the tax board's records disclosed that Mrs. Hauptmann agreed to the settlement August 5, Harry H. Hickey, internal revenue collector at Albany, N. Y., said that funds impounded by the Government in connection with the case had been released. Estimating the amount against which the Government previously had established liens at "about $10,000," he added:

"We got our money (the tax payment) and we released the liens."

In charging Hauptmann with the deficiencies in 1935, the Treasury claimed a deficiency of $117.67 for 1932 and $5,283.27 for 1933, which together with penalties and interest amounted to $9,678.30.

Mrs. Hauptmann, through her attorney, Frank B. Meseke, of New York, agreed she owed all of the deficiency charged for 1932, but the estate and the government compromised on $1,779.59 as the 1933 deficiency. All penalties were forgiven.

Income Source Unlisted.

In its efforts to collect more taxes from Hauptmann and later from his estate, the Treasury made no mention of any source of income it sought to tax, but designated a bank deposit of $18,965 as "unidentified bank deposits."

In the early stages of the case both Hauptmann and Mrs. Hauptmann complained to the tax board that the government, by seizing their funds, had seriously handicapped the Bronx carpenter in his defense.

The Hauptmanns' indicated defense to the tax charges was that the "unidentified bank deposits" were funds contributed by Isador Fisch, described by the carpenter as his partner in a fur business, who died in Germany in 1933.

Slayers Linked In Theft Beating

Detectives hunting the bandits who beat and robbed Sam Siratonis, 35, in his tailor shop Tuesday, said yesterday they believe the fugitives to be the "noon-hour" robbers who murdered a man several months ago.

The robbery, staged in broad daylight when Siratonis was knocked unconscious by two colored men, who escaped with more than $300, is of the same type as several perpetrated months ago by the bandits who preyed on shopkeepers during the lunch hour.

A colored customer in a Ninth street grocery store was killed by one of the bandits who beat him to death with a sawed-off shotgun. The bandits have never been apprehended.

Siratonis was taken to Garfield Hospital after the robbery and treated for possible concussion of the brain. He was reported to be recovering yesterday.

Power Companies Seek to Halt TVA

Knoxville, Tenn., Aug. 19 (AP).—A group of 19 private power companies which recently challenged the constitutionality of the Tennessee Valley Authority act asked Federal District Court today to halt all power activities of the TVA pending a settlement of the suit.

The request was made in a motion filed in connection with the constitutionality suit.

The motion seeks to tie up every phase of the TVA's power program. The authority would be stopped from making power contracts with cities, from building transmission lines, carrying out rural electrification plans, completing power dams and otherwise doing anything that might be construed as designed to further its power projects.

J. L. Bailey, Kin Of Slain Bandit, Is Recovering

Victim in Stabbing Still Refuses to Name His Assailants.

John L. Bailey, 38, brother of the notorious tri-State mobster, Claude Bailey, is recovering in Mount Alto Hospital from a stab wound believed inflicted because "he talked too much."

Bailey's injury became known to police Tuesday, four days after he was stabbed and two days after he had applied to the hospital for treatment.

Hospital attaches described the fact that police had not been notified immediately of the possible murder attempt as "just an oversight."

Detective Sergts. George Darnell and Jerry Flaherty, of the homicide squad, said they questioned Bailey at the hospital, but would not name his assailants.

The injured man described the incident as "just a fight after we had been drinking."

Bailey was cut during a street brawl at Fourteenth and K streets tnorhwest Friday night. He went to his home and applied for treatment only when the wound became infected. Doctors said he has a deep flesh wound above the heart.

Bailey, whose police record shows arrests on charges from disorderly conduct to manslaughter, was reported involved in the attempted prison break of his brother. Claude was shot and killed by guards as he attempted to flee the Lorton Reformatory, where he was serving time for complicity in crimes committed by the tri-State gang. John Bailey was seized in a taxicab near the prison.

The police said yesterday they have been unable to locate anyone who saw the altercation in which Bailey was cut. They still are investigating, but said they will not be able to prosecute those involved if Bailey refuses to testify.

Ex-Townsend Aid To Lead Revolters

Boston, Aug. 19 (AP).—Dr. Clinton Wunder, ousted last week as a director of the Townsend movement, announced late today he proposed to lead an insurgent movement of Townsendites dissatisfied with the Lemke-Townsend alliance.

Dr. Wunder, in an interview here, said his leadership of such a movement in opposition to Dr. Francis E. Townsend had been the result of hundreds of complaints from members of Townsend clubs against what he termed "the dictatorship of the founder of the old-age pension plans."

These complaints, he said, have been most numerous from Southern States, where members objected to the alliance with the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, and from the West Coast, which he described as "normally heavily Democratic."

The Federal Diary

By Samuel Lubell.

We never realized there was so much inventive genius in the local Government service until yesterday when, in our wanderings around town, we ran into three Government workers who have recently received patents.

At the Bureau of Printing and Engraving we found John W. Connors who has worked out an automatic transmission gearing for automobiles that combines in a single unit all the gearing devices you can think of. Included in Connor's single unit transmission gearing are the automatic shift of gears, a device to keep the car from sliding back on grades, free wheeling, clutch and the conventional gear shifts.

Connors has been working on his invention for three and a half years. Some evenings he would spend only an hour or two but at other times he would become so engrossed that he would toil far into the night. He did his experimenting partly at home and partly in the factory of a friend.

"I've always been interested in tinkering with things even as a child," he remarked. For the last 20 years he has been with the Bureau of Printing and Engraving, most of the time engaged in experimental work in the development of new printing equipment for the G. P. O. He has also taken a correspondence school course in mechanics.

Patent grants are nothing new to Dr. Samuel Palkin in the Bureau of Chemistry and Soils, who has just developed a highly sensitive gauge for measuring gas pressures. In the 24 years Dr. Palkin has been with the Department of Agriculture he has secured three other patents, two for work in purified anaesthetic ether and the third for a photo-sensitizing dye.

Where most pressure gauges contain mercurial liquids, Palkin's new gauge uses oil. The oil being lighter than the mercury makes for more sensitive readings. Although the gauge's major value is industrial, Palkin plans to use it in his work on naval stores which requires distillation of turpentine under gas pressures.

Palkin graduated from Yale in 1910. Before entering the Department he was with Tiffany & Co., world-famed jewellers, doing research in precious metals.

The third inventor, Henry S. Noddings, a mechanic at the Navy Yard, wasn't very communicative. All we could learn about his invention was that it was an automatic rowboat and that he planned to enter it in the President's regatta on September 29. Until then he wanted to keep it a secret.

From 150 to 200 jobs are still open at the General Accounting Office in connection with the bonus audit. The jobs are not to be filled all at once but gradually as the 3,000,000 bonus vouchers that must be checked come in from the Treasury.

Work on the audit has already begun at the decidely non-air-cooled old Patent Office Building. About 100 persons have been taken on while a number of workers have been transferred from other audit sections.

Most of the jobs available are for comptometer operators, auditors and messengers. The G. A. O. is taking some of the workers from the Civil Service lists—22 of the 100 hired thus far were recommended by the Civil Service Commission—from New Deal agencies forced to reduce their staffs and most of the others from the G. A. O.'s long waiting list.

Right now the jobs are for from sx to nine months. The audit must be completed before the end of the fiscal year.

Hot Dogs.

Three new locals and one new State federation have received N. F. F. E. charters, according to an announcement by Gertrude M. McNally, organization secretary-treasurer.

The new locals are No. 564 at Salina, Kans., by employes of the Soil Conservation Service; No. 565, Fort Worth, Tex., Bureau of Air Commerce, and No. 566, Des Moines, Iowa, custodial. The Texan unions have organized the new State federation.

Friday's symphony program at the Watergate which is to be dedicated to Government employes, will include Glinka's Overture to "Russlan and Ludmilla," William G. Still's "Afro-American Symphony" and Johann Strauss' "Blue Danube" waltz, to be directed by Lieut. Charles Benter, of the Navy Band; Wagner's Overture to the "Flying Dutchman," Moussorgsky's Russian Dance, "Gopak" and Svendsen's "Norwegian Rhapsody," with Walter Bauer, of the Department of Agriculture Orchestra, conducting.

The program will close with "The Dome of the Capitol," a symphonic poem by Siegfried Scharbau, of the U. S. Marine Band. The composition which was inspired by a poem by Representative Samuel B. Pettengill and dedicated to President Roosevelt, will be conducted by Scharbau instead of Capt. Taylor Branson as originally planned.

John J. Dugan, of the HOLC, telephoned last night to tell us that R. O. Brown, of the Home Office Audit, has qualified as a certified public accountant in the District.

We have just received an invitation from the Resettlement Press Club to join in their glorification of the lowly frankfurter at the Club's Hot-Dog Olympics at 6 p. m. Friday in Rock Creek Park. Among the Olympic events planned are a "freakish 100-yard dash, scintilating javelin and discus throwing, a puff-ball game and a pseudo 1-mile relay race," and (we assume) a good deal of weenie eating.

The care of the hot dogs is to be entrusted to John C. Zauner, as "chief executioner," and a committee of hot-dog catchers, Aubrey McKinney, L. R. S. Barnes, Royston Hutcheson, Bernard Capell, Marguerite L. Krenek, Leo Rose, George Rarey, Maxine Mitchell, Mable Haller, Maude Woods, Ted Daugherty, Betty Urenson, J. T. Heffron, Albert Armstrong and Joe Zuber.

The "Answer Me This" broadcast of the Office of Education at 4:30 p. m. today over N. B. C. will include questions on comets, Pulitzer Prizes, transatlantic ship crossings, the comparative sizes of the Queen Mary, the Normandie and the dirigible Von Hindenburg and the Dionne quintuplets.

Stag Night Delayed.

The midsummer stag night program of the Cosmopolitan Club has been postponed until Thursday, August 27. Featuring golf and a dinner with special entertainment, the event will be held at the Kenwood Country Club. The regular weekly luncheon meeting will be held today at 12:30 p. m. at the Carlton Hotel.

YOU didn't say that, when you married her. But has she become one? Does she spend her time trudging wearily about, buying, shopping, comparing—trying to be as thrifty as possible with your money?

If she does, why not give her a tip? Tell her to shop by telephone, instead. Tell her how it will save her time, her energy, give her more time for leisure. And (in your ear) it will probably give you a happier, younger wife.

The School Budget.

For the next fiscal year the Board of Education is seeking an appropriation of more than $17,500,000. This is $5,030,000 more than the current allotment for education in the District. It is explained that the extra millions will be applied largely to new school buildings.

Elaborating, the superintendent of schools points out that during the depression every effort was made to operate the schools at the lowest possible cost. Needed extensions in the school plant were thus regularly postponed. The result is that, after several years of virtual neglect, additions and renovations are needed on every hand. In the meantime, too, the population of the city has greatly increased, putting ever greater demands on the schools. No one will deny these points.

Nor can it be claimed that the repairs and extensions contemplated for 1938 would be undertaken without careful reflection. Six months ago the Board of Education announced a five-year building program. This was salvaged from an earlier schedule drawn up in 1924, but soon abandoned when Congress refused to allow funds to put it into effect. The plans call for an expenditure of $20,000,000, entailing the construction of 24 new buildings and the enlargment of 45 others. The 1938 budget request for $4,024,000—approximately one-fifth of $20,000,000—is clearly based on this program (land purchases and additions to the teaching staff make up the $5,030,000 increase mentioned above).

But $5,030,000 is a large sum of money, particularly when the District is looking forward to a deficit this year of nearly $1,000,000. Moreover, the precedent would make illogical any further refusals to grant extra funds for enlarging the police department, for renovating the local jail or reformatory, for proceeding with the Municipal Building or any of the other crying needs of the District. The Board of Education might have been better advised, in filing its budget application, to have kept in mind the whole picture of District affairs.

The Rise In Living Costs.

The wholesale price index of the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics is slightly higher than a year ago, and the bureau's general index of retail food costs for mid-July is 4.8 per cent above the figure for July, 1935. But current indices do not yet reveal the effect of drought shortages upon the prices of important foodstuffs and upon living costs. Commissary experts of the CCC, for instance, are predicting that by next spring the daily rations of each member will cost 55 cents, or nearly 10 cents more than the July daily average.

If CCC food costs should rise as much as 20 per cent, the budget of private householders would likewise be thrown seriously out of balance by the advance in grocery bills. Pressure to increase wages would follow, and, if successful, would probably mean a rise in prices of manufactured goods. Moreover, any pronounced rise in prices would add directly and indirectly to the running costs of the Federal and local governments, although the effect of such changes would seldom be so directly felt as in the case of the CCC.

Drought conditions in this country are not the only cause of rising prices—actual and prospective—because increases have not been confined to foodstuffs, or limited to any single country. The British Board of Trade July index of wholesale prices, for example, has risen 6.2 per cent since July, 1935. Food prices in Great Britain are at the highest point since May, 1932, and industrial raw materials are at the maximum figure recorded since September, 1930. The French index of wholesale prices likewise advanced rapidly between the end of June and the end of July and is at present 15 per cent above the level of a year ago.

In Germany, price control and restrictions of all sorts make quoted prices very unreliable indicators of changing conditions of demand and supply, but even there wholesale price indices are somewhat higher. A British official report dealing with economic conditions in Germany estimates that there has been a rise in living costs of from 15 to 20 per cent since 1933.

These current price increases might be viewed with satisfaction if they were due entirely to an improved demand, following upon world-wide economic recovery. That is the case to some extent. But a good part of the rise is due to crop failures or to governmental policies that create an artificial domestic scarcity and put obstacles in the way of imports.

Actual and anticipated future increases in living costs attributable to such causes are a sign of impoverishment, rather than prosperity. Moreover, they carry a threat to industrial peace in all countries where wages and salaries are adjusted to a lower level of living costs.

The Fundamental Struggle.

Can democratic and dictatorial states live peacefully together in a world where totalitarianism has more and more become an article of export? Or must this struggle for survival between democracy and the modern forms of despotism, a struggle once confined within the boundaries of individual nations, lead to another Armageddon because the world is not big enough for both?

The Spanish crisis has revealed that these questions are no phantasms of a fevered imagination. The forces struggling for mastery in that country have their counterparts in every nation. Everywhere like is calling to like. The mere fact that it has taken so long to get even tentative and partial agreement on the French plan to localize the Spanish civil war by scrupulous nonintervention, reveals to what an alarming extent not only the sympathies but also the interests of many of the powers are involved in the outcome of that struggle. Indeed dramatic as the Spanish struggle itself has been, it is now overshadowed by the international implications.

On Tuesday it was reported that the Italian air force is being tuned up in preparation for action in Spain. The move may be merely a bluff on Il Duce's part, to compel France not only to maintain an official policy of noninterference, but also to prevent French citizens from rendering any aid to the Spanish government. But the real import of the development, whether bluff or not, lies in its open admission that from the Italian point of view a victory for the Spanish government and a defeat of the Spanish Fascists would be a calamity.

Dictatorships, by their very nature, live in a perpetual state of dynamic tension. The dictator may boast of his huge popular following, the unceasing acclaim which is accorded him, the complete absence of any opposition. Yet he cannot help but be beset by the gnawing fear that these manifestations of solidarity are unreal: Potemkin villages that hide the basic fragility of the regime.

Hence the constant search for prestige in an effort to solidify the people behind the dictator. Apparently they must be won over and over again. And everything, be they a triumph over poorly armed tribesmen in Africa, or a world heavyweight championship, serves as grist for the glorification of the totalitarian state and its chief.

From the viewpoint of Italy and Germany, a victory of the rebels in Spain would constitute a victory of prestige for Duce and Fuehrer. The Italian and German people could and would be told that their political systems are models which other peoples and nations are taking over. Nothing succeeds like success. On the other hand a victory for the Popular Front government at Madrid would, without question, encourage anti-Fascist elements everywhere to assert themselves and to close their ranks against the threat from the right.

Such a development dictators have real cause to fear. They may find it necessary to pay lip service to nonintervention because if they do not the Spanish struggle might broaden into an international war for which they are not yet prepared. But only an uneasy truce can result from such action. Dictatorship and democracy are already, in a very real sense, engaged in a death struggle, of which the devastation in Spain is only too symbolic.

The Forgotten PWA

Secretary Ickes has reason to be somewhat annoyed when President Roosevelt outlines to the press a new policy for the PWA without even mentioning that subject to the PWA administrator. More than a week has passed since the President told newspapermen how the new public works fund must be spent. But Administrator Ickes has apparently been left entirely in the dark, except for what he has read in the papers.

When such changes in policy are contemplated, the presumption is, of course that they will be fully discussed with the administrator or department head concerned. In this case there seems to have been no discussion with him whatever. A policy that virtually hamstrings the PWA was adopted without any prior knowledge on the part of Secretary Ickes. And detailed instructions as to the new regulations are yet to be furnished to those who must carry them out. It is precisely this sort of casual and haphazard administration that has weakened public confidence in many New Deal agencies and lessened the effectiveness of their work.

The reason for this inconsiderate treatment of the PWA is not obscure. For a long time it has been apparent that the President is more interested in the Hopkins theory of work relief than in the more substantial type of public works heretofore sponsored through PWA. So the organization headed by Secretary Ickes is being converted over his head into a second WPA for the employment of relief labor on relatively minor projects.

If the President's rough plans, as they are understood by PWA officials, are to be imposed upon that agency, its primary function and purpose will be very greatly changed. Even on the try-anything-once theory, so fundamental an alteration of policy would seem to warrant thorough discussion and analysis with the officials to whom conduct of the public works program has been intrusted.

Mr. Ickes' chief concern seems to be that he is unable to spend anything so long as the regulations are thus confused. From the public viewpoint that might be an advantage—considering the state of Government finances—except for the fact that any diminution of substantial public works construction may easily be offset by a larger volume of boondoggling. It is this prospect, as well as the casual manner in which the entire problem has been handled, which gives real substance to Mr. Ickes' obvious apprehension.

Point And Counterpoint.

The exchange of criticism between Secretary Wallace and Chairman Hamilton of the Republican National Committee emphasizes a significant deficiency of the soil conservation act. That measure has not yet been applied to the livestock industry. It remains to be seen whether the AAA's current conferences in the Western States will be able to work out a practical program for stockmen, but the act was primarily designed to aid those who till the soil.

Mr. Hamilton complained that the soil conservation act will "pay every farmer of this Nation to go into competition with cattle and sheep men of the great grazing States of the West." His statement is altogether too sweeping. Yet it does voice a legitimate complaint. In the long run the result of subsidizing pastures and hay crops may be to increase livestock on farms, particularly dairy stock, and thus upset the balance which has been attained through the natural operation of economic law.

An increase of grazing stock on farms would doubtless work to the advantage of agriculture in the South and Middle West. In fostering that policy, however, the Government ought to exercise every precaution against unfair treatment of livestock industries already established in areas that are suitable only for grazing. Unfortunately, Secretary Wallace did not attempt to meet this issue. He defended the increase of forage crops on farms by reference to the drought, which certainly was not a factor in development of the present AAA program. The question at issue, of course, is the long-term effects of a policy which tends to concentrate excessive benefits in one branch of the closely related agricultural and livestock industries.

Issues of such importance demand thoughtful and realistic consideration. Secretary Wallace renders no service to the country or his party when he befogs the point of controversy by accusing the Republicans of opposing "any effective national program for agriculture." Nor does Mr. Hamilton contribute to public enlightenment when he jumps from a discussion of agricultural problems to the exaggerated assertion that the New Deal has created "60 new agencies of power, admittedly shackles for the enslavement of a people."

Go Northwest, Young Woman!

There are all kinds of ways to drum up tourist trade. California endeavors to make us climate conscious and Florida's siren song is lyric with flowers. What Hawaii can't do with a ukulele and a lei is scarcely worth doing. A home talent show, such as the Dionnes put on, is another means of putting a region in the black. When business gets dull, communities have even been known to scare up a sea serpent to lure vacationers.

It has remained, however, for the publicity experts of the Department of Interior to excel all previous accomplishments in travel talks. In a release which should start a girl rush to Alaska, the department announces that there are two and a half times as many men as there are women in America's attic. And together with this exciting information comes the delicate hint that: "In direct opposition the District of Columbia boasts only 90 males for every 100 females." We would have said "deplores" rather than "boasts," but that is a minor issue. The real point is the department's subtle promotion of resettlement of a novel variety.

Naturally Uncle Sam does not undertake to guarantee a happy ending with every railroad ticket purchased to Alaska as a result of this release. There is even a subtle warning to overly romantic young women in the chilling statement that the Territory's "influx of high-booted males is over." But it may be hoped that this realistic note will not of itself discourage any lovelorn ladies in the District's surplus. Boots or no boots, there is always consolation in Shakespeare's advice to spinsters.

"God made him, and therefore let him pass for a man."

"The decalsimated sopostiquated ephemera results from the transient reactions of spasmodic multiplicity," asserts a writer whose mother must have been frightened by a dictionary.

A statistician says multiple births are more frequent in large families. It's pretty hard to fool a statistician.

It might be advisable to change that clause from "till death do us part" to "till careers do us part."

Spanish Omelet.

"Watch Coughlin"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: After listening to Father Coughlin, one turned from the radio Sunday with the sickening feeling that "it can happen here."

There was the same subtle reference to the Jews, the same condemnation of the President as a Communist, the same old Hitler theatrics. Well does The Post in its editorial of August 18 challenge us to "Watch Coughlin."

Democracy has arrived at the cross-roads. History will rate these days as a decisive turning point in the annals of mankind. It will be well for many of us to think carefully about this republic of ours and what it means to us. It might be well for us to recall Valley Forge and the 11,000 patriots starving for an ideal; Tom Paine drawing his drum toward him and writing upon the head, "These are times that try men's souls." Today there are thousands and thousands of men, believers in democracy, looking at this world from the other side of barbed wire entanglements of concentration camps.

It was the dream of Woodrow Wilson to make this world safe for democracy; may it be the achievement of Franklin D. Roosevelt to save democracy for the world!

MELVIN D. HILDRETH.
Washington, Aug. 18.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: From out my loudspeaker last Sunday, tuned to the convention of the National Union for Social Justice—the words of that inspired oracle of modern Christianity, Father Coughlin—came roaring:

"I am not asking the Jews of the United States to accept Christianity . . . but that they accept Christ's principle of brotherhood."

At this there was an enormous roar of approval and delighted approbation. Yet methinks there is something incongruous in all this. Here is a descendent of the Celtic hordes who proposes that the Jews would be better off if they accepted the principles of brotherhood first enunciated by that old Jewish prophet, Isaiah.

Are we really going back to the good old days? Is Germany reverting to the savagery of the Teutonii and Germanii with their ordeal by fire and judgment by water? Is the Catholic Church rearing up the head of the Inquisition of maloderous memory? Are the Moors invading Spain again—the invited mercenaries of one rival kindgom against the other? Shades of the Cid before whose tomb the Spanish Fascists prostrate themselves, but whose memory they desecrate by their unholy alliance with the Moorish hordes.

It seems to this writer at least that the exhortation to practice brotherhood comes with little grace from the head of a movement that preaches racial hatred and a member of a church that backed up the ruthless conquest of the defenseless Ethiopians by the blackshirts of Mussolini.

Let us have an end to all this nonsense about religious differences. Our founding fathers intuitively foresaw that only by separation of church and State could we avoid the fratricidal wars that followed the former attempts of Catholic France and Spain and Protestant England and Germany to extend the power and influence of their respective religious systems. If we have succeeded in avoiding the pitfalls of religious disensions we have the Constitution to thank for that and no latter-day replica of a barbaric, superstitous Savonarola can alter that great historical fact.

THEODORE MORANCE.
Washington, Aug. 18.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial in The Post of August 18 entitled, "Watch Coughlin," is most commendable. You have my heartiest congratulations for the splendid manner in which you have warned the public of America's No. 1 potential Fascist leader.

Let us hope that our country has advanced beyond that stage where such self-styled saviors of the Nation as the Rev. Coughlin, Dr. Townsend, the Rev. Gerald Smith and Representative Lemke can individually, or collectively, mislead any great number of our people into the belief that their fantastic ideas and plans would be workable and create a Utopia.

We may not receive accurate reports of conditions in those European countries where fascism is in control and where it is now fighting for control by means of the civil war in Spain. Yet enough information has come to us in many ways concerning its methods, which should cause Americans to be ever on guard against the rising up in their midst of this apparent war-like system of government, though it may begin under titles such as National Union for Social Justice, Share-the-Wealth, or many other organizations.

President Roosevelt so courageously and eloquently expressed the feelings of most of our people, as regards war, in his Chatauqua, N. Y., address. It behooves the American people to heed the warnings in his address and in this editorial in The Post lest the old world hatreds, prejudices, etc., be instilled in enough minds in our country to cause troubles which are so frequent in European countries concerning form of government.

Certainly America wants no violence in any Government change. May she never have it again.

B. C. WALKER.
Washington, Aug. 18.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your newspaper's attitude toward the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin shall ultimately end in ruin, for, the American citizenry are not such assinine fools as you imagine. They cannot be swayed in this day of education by inane editorials, that even an eighth grade school boy could write.

Let me cite three specific cases wherein you not only gave offense, but portrayed far better than I your crass stupidity.

Every child knows, money and work are the prima causa of our depression. Give the poor money by honest employment and prosperity and progress will continue to advance. This is impossible under Wall street and the present Federal Reserve set-up.

Father Coughlin, as every Catholic should, is preaching the encyclicals of Leo XIII and Pius XI. These documents are by holy obedience enforced upon all priests and Catholics, even though they do not wish to accept their contents. Their truth, moreover, is so apparent that none can deny their import. Your editorials, therefore, directly or indirectly, are a criticism of millions, who are as good Catholics, obliged to accept this teaching.

The third offense you offer is ignorance. Why do you attack as a demagogue a man and priest, who is upholding the American Constitution, when you have failed in the attempt? Cannot a child read the following clause: "Congress shall have the power to coin and regulate the value of money."

J. ANTHONY FAUST.
Washington, Aug. 18.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your clear-cut straightforward editorial, "Coughlin for Coughlin," in The Post for August 15, you state: "In the recent Congressional investigation the O. A. R. P. was clearly shown to be a racket intended to line the pockets of its promoters. Coughlin's line is less mercenary than Dr. Townsend's conquest of the gullible."

Time was when I thought as you think of the radio priest, but having first-hand knowledge of instances where an outpouring of checks and currency have gone to Coughlin after his radio tirades, I have changed my mind, believing that Townsend's appeals for money have been bold and direct. Coughlin employs the more subtle and elusive methods. In practice, to get money and personal glory, Townsend and Coughlin differ; in principle they are of the same stripe—hoping to be heard, not for humanity's alleviation as they allege, but for the purpose as I have stated.

"In seasons of uncertainty the loudest mouth speaking from the emptiest head may seem to have the largest following," is a statement I keep in a conspicuous place on my desk. To me it is a correct definition of the Townsend-Coughlin philosophy.

C. B. R.
Washington, Aug. 18.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial "Watch Coughlin" reads like what one would find in a Communist paper.

To make a comparison between the distinguished gathering in Cleveland on August 16 and the gathering of Kentucky hoodlums, who publicly proved they knew less than the poor unfortunate they helped to abuse, is, to speak frankly, a raw deal.

The only justifiable comparison is between the kindly priest who knelt in prayer with the unfortunate and Father Coughlin. It would be far more fitting and helpful if it had been pointed out what can happen, even in America, when God is not in the hearts of its people. This beastly crowd revealed itself when it booed the unfortunate when he knelt in prayer.

We are watching Felix Frankfurter and his gang and this is the danger spot at the moment. The Rev. Father Coughlin is not to be feared—he long ago dedicated himself to God and he is guarding his flock.

Now I hope you will redeem yourself and in behalf of good sportsmanship publish this letter.

CHRISTIAN.
Washington, Aug. 18.

Because it carries no signature, the above letter would not ordinarily be accorded publication by The Post. An exception is made in this one instance, since several anonymous letters have been received on this subject, of which that signed "Christian" is representative.—Editor.

'Slavery In Arkansas?"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please permit me to thank you personally and also on behalf of my constituency for your able and courageous editorial, "Slavery in Arkansas?" which appeared in The Post August 15.

With unequaled sagacity the founders of this Republic reared, without prototype or precedent, its solid walls and stately columns on the broad basis of human equality and of certain inalienable rights, such as life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, to which they declared all men entitled. The Negro is here, in the providence of God, through no fault of his own. He cannot be eliminated or long ignored. The sooner he ceases to be a problem and is recognized as an American citizen and a man—a constituent part of the body politic—the better for him and for the Nation. Let it be borne in mind that the Negro is an American by birth, training, spirit and ideals; which count for Americanism more than does race or color.

The well-known peonage system in Arkansas and elsewhere in this fair land is not only a local menace, but a national dishonor. It should be promptly ended. The ruthless infractions of man's inalienable rights can never be buried beyond resurrection. Right and truth, in the end, will rise in their might, burst the coffin lid, and live to vex men until equity and justice get a hearing. Injustice solves no problems.

Spain tried it. Through the years she sowed wrong and oppression, only to reap the ripe, red harvest of insurrection and revolution. Truly, the law of physics that action and reaction are equal is true also in the moral world. Oppression, injustice, and economic exploitation revenge themselves gradually but severely, and the race guilty of them suffers more in the end, by degradation and loss of civilization, than the race that is the victim of them. Keep the Negro down and you drag the white man down also. Right is diademed with blessings many: Wrong is dowered with curses numerous.

The REV. F. R. KILLINGSWORTH.

The Post Impressionist

The Berkman That E. G. Knew.

Post Office, Thursday.

FROM St. Tropez, on the French Riviera, Emma Goldman—long leading anarchist in America, now long an exile—writes the Post-Impressionist about one of his recently published impressions. Under the shadow of the suicide of Alexander Berkman, her friend for 47 years, she keeps—rather, she spends—all her old enthusiasm for revolution. And at 67 she scolds your columnist for what she calls his conservatism—just as she scolded him for it when he was a boy.

"It takes," she exclaims, "the dead to rouse the living! After years of silence, you are moved by Berkman's death to remember the days we spent together. Yet you damn him with faint praise!

"When he came out of his living grave," she insists, "he was the giant he had been when he went into it. Even as late as '28 he could swim, run, play baseball as well as when he was a youngster."

This, however, "is of small moment, really," says she. On the other hand:

"It is not true that he was disappointed in the Russian revolution. His clear mind saw what the befuddled intelligentsia have not yet been able to see: that the revolution and the Bolshevik regime were worlds apart — that the latter crushed the former . . .

"Berkman's life was not 'a failure,' unless you measure success by cents and dollars or social position . . . Few in our time have lived and died so true to themselves as Alexander Berkman."

E. G. admits that his cause and hers is temporarily obscured "by the advent of dictatorships. No one," she says, "cares for freedom any longer. Most people have no brains to think for themselves, or are too weak to take the consequences of their thoughts. Hence the clamor for the strong-arm man. Nevertheless, his 'practicability' is only for the hour, his success only on the surface. It has not touched, it never will touch, the basic needs of humanity."

She sends me copies of some memoranda written by her to author John Powys and certain of her political comrades immediately after the suicide. Whatever you think of anarchism, they are moving by reason of her faith therein and by reason of their loyalty to her friend.

"I have," she informs her fellow anarchists, "two letters from Comrade Berkman (dated a few days before his death). Neither gives any indication that he contemplated ending his life. On my birthday he called me up from Nice to give me his good wishes and to assure me that, though he was still feeling badly, there was no need to worry . . . The day was incomplete without Sasha, who had never failed me before except when we were in different prisons or separated in different countries."

She tells of her 2 a. m. summons. Of how the dying man had drawn his bedclothes about him to hide from his companions the horror of his wound. Of the watch beside him, in hospital, until the end:

"Sasha had always maintained that, if ever he were stricken, he would go by his own hand . . . He wanted to be cremated, but even that small service was made impossible—no crematorium nearer than Marseilles; the cost would have been 8,000 francs. Sasha's fortune was $80, and that was at once impounded by the French . . .

"During our exile in France, we had gathered a few friends around us—not anarchists, but lovely people who admired Sasha and are most devoted to me. They came with arms full of flowers . . . Sholem Ash, the writer, was also present . . . The largest part of my life was buried with my old pal."

And to Powys: "Yes, the dictatorships are like a frightful epidemic. They have already infected the whole world. Now it is Spain . . . No wonder the Left elements are staking their all . . . True, some of them are fighting the black plague to exchange it for the red dictatorship—the more do I rejoice in the splendid demonstration of my own comrades there, the Anarcho-Syndicalists and Anarchists."

She might, she concludes, content herself with "a place of rest," but has been too long "in the thick of the struggle." She wants to die for her cause:

"Yet that has ever been denied me. To Russia I came too late. And now in Spain I would be but a burden instead of a help owing to my ignorance of the language . . .

"It had always been our belief that those who insist on the inevitability of revolutionary changes should die fighting for them. Well, Berkman remained consistent to the last. He ended his life when he could no longer give it for his ideal. I hope I may do no less."

Let the record close on that note. It leaves this columnist where he has always been, and he hopes his reaction will be yours:

E. G. can't succeed in commanding his agreement with her views on suicide or politics—but she can't fail to compel his affection for E. G.

Fair Enough

'Pro' Olympics.

It is mildly amusing now to recall the so-called Carnegie report and the consternation in the land over its charges of proselyting and petty professionalism in some of the famous American football colleges and compare that overemphasis with the mood and method of sport in the dictator countries, especially Germany. The best of the football schools paid off in peanuts, so to speak, and though there was a tendency to use the athletes as gladiators, they were students, nevertheless, and many of them went through college, wearing corduroys because they would last four years.

As a rule, the so-called "pros" were poor kids who were given jobs or concessions, such as laundry routes, hot-dog stands or pants-pressing privileges, and permitted to earn their little pay. Of course, there were some meek jobs involving strictly nominal duties, but in general the subsidized football player had to put in his hours, and some fired furnaces, shoveled snow, washed windows or dishes or tended telephone switchboards at night.

It was not a pampered and luxurious life which they led, and in football season they were constantly under pressure from the college coach, their instructors and the schedule.

• • • •

In return for tuition, books and quarters, which often were pretty miserable accommodation for exalted heroes, and a little pocket money they were expected to bring in enormous gate receipts which were used to support the unprofitable sports and retire bonds on the amphitheaters in which they played.

True, this was repugnant, to use a very pompous word, to the American hypocrisy that amateur sport is just fun, but the hypocrisy of this idea was pretty generally acknowledged by the schools and by the public. Football, with all its drudgery, undoubtedly was fun, but it was also a task, and a player gave his services on the varsity in exchange for education. Some were more or less immune to education and emerged from college prepared for no other calling but sport, but more were reasonably bright and earnest about their studies.

Except a brief period during Huey Long's dictatorship in Louisiana, where he was imitating Adolf Hitler, no American Government actually made sport a political activity of the State. When Jesse Owens was appointed a page in the Ohio Legislature there was a pious uproar about this sinister blow at the very wellspring of amateurism, or something like that. Yet the job was a legitimate one, and there seemed to be no good reason why a famous athlete should be barred from an opportunity which might have been open to a strictly sedentary student.

The dictators have gone much further than we ever did in this country. Although Mussolini once wrote that he had no regard for people who pend their energy in a frenzy of sport, he has since subsidized athletics as a preparation for war. Moreover, an Italian's victory in international competition is a victory for Fascists and Mussolini, and is exploited as such.

Hitler, who borrowed most of his system from the Duce, has likewise imitated Italy in this particular. In fact, he now has gone further and is offering to the champion German athlete an official glory, an official status of hero and a state subsidy. The best German players will be retired from toil for six months at public expense in order to perfect themselves for the next Olympic games, in which, quite frankly, they will represent der Fuehrer.

Next time, when the Germans go to Japan, there will be no hypocrisy about their status and their mission. This year, under pressure of an uncomprehending and rather fastidious American opposition der Fuehrer found it necessary to deny certain obvious facts.

In Japan, however, where sport is a State institution, they see eye to eye with Hitler and Mussolini, and the nations will meet as nations if war doesn't call the gladiators out to kill one another in the meantime.

Hitler, Mussolini and the Russians, too reward athletic achievements with promotion and pay, which certainly is all right and an even thing when they meet. But it is something to think over when American, British and other Amateurs go to the Olympics.

• • • •

By comparison with the American system of Olympic participation, the dictator system represents overemphasis and professionalism of the most flagrant sort. In the fundamental Olympic sports, which are track and field and swimming, as distinguished from pretzel-bending and other local specialties, the Americans probably would hold their own for years to come even against the state gladiators of the Old World.

Still they cannot meet on common ground. The games were designed as competitions of amateur athletes, and the Americans adhere to the original plan. The dictators, to whom everything is political, have imposed their peculiar ideas on the Olympic Games, and they never will be amateur sports again in our time.

Doctors Still Anxious Over Olson Condition

Rochester, Minn., Aug. 19 (U.P.).—Gov. Floyd B. Olson's condition tonight was announced as "very serious, indeed," by a trio of Mayo Clinic physicians, including Dr. William J. Mayo.

The three physicians—Drs. Mayo, A. B. Rivers, and Waltham Walters—issued a long statement indicating that one of recurrent crises had been passed, but that the Governor's condition still was grave.

The physicians described the illness in detail, but did not name it cancer of the stomach, as reported.

Landon Campaign

Republican Candidate Opens His Drive For Presidency Today, With East Anxious To Inspect His Western Virtues.

By Hilding Siversen.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Omaha.

COMING OUT of eastern Colorado into western Nebraska, Gov. Landon on Thursday hits the long trail of the 1936 campaign. Traversing the ground first made famous by Kit Carson, Slade, Wild Bill Hickock, the pony express riders that made Julesburg a remount station, and a long procession of picturesque cowboys, Indian fighters and pioneers, he will pass the old ranch of Buffalo Bill, and Ogallalah and Kearney and North Platte, retracing the old Oregon Trail for a while until he reaches the Omaha country and picks up a part of the old Daniel Boone trail in Iowa, crossing at Council Bluffs, where Indian pow-wows were held, then to Boone, Ames and the old Mississippi trading posts.

It will be "Oh, Susannah" all the way, and the farmers of the northern Middle West will have their first look at the Republican Presidential candidate who comes out of Kansas with a homely twang in his speech reminiscent of the postoffice parliaments and the Odd Fellows Hall town meetings of Populist days and the furious village arguments of the Bryan-McKinley era. Without consciously bringing up the traditions of this prairie country, Alf Landon will bring with him a breeze of the prairies as he says "Howdy!" and "Hiyah!" to the folks along the way.

His journey will be the signal for the campaign to swing into full tilt, and from now on there will be a continuous bombardment from both sides.

Chautauqua, New York, is one of his chief eastern objectives. Learning of this, President Roosevelt hastened to get there first. The President has the instinct for showmanship, and it might be gathered from this move that the Democratic managers are getting jittery. Landon comes into this arena a comparatively unknown quantity, as far as the usual political specifications go. It is like putting a man from Mars into the ring with a Jack Dempsey. A Dempsey and his trainers wouldn't know exactly what to expect. The man from Mars might be an easy target to hit, or he might have some baffling maneuvers under his cuff which would throw the Dempseyman off his guard.

As Landon moves into the East from the prairies of the West, there must be something just a little disconcerting about it all, to the Farley camp. They know a lot about the rules of the game as it is played along the Hudson, but just what is this strange apparition coming from the plains and the mountain country. Who knows? Can he be met by the usual moves? What will Landon say? What potent magic has he to work among the farmers, the dwellers in the small towns? To be more specific, just why are the Middle Western States more and more toward Landon, in the straw votes?

Roosevelt's Drought Conference Causes Comment.

THE MOVE resulting in President Roosevelt calling the drought conference was another evidence of the jittery feeling in the Farley camp. Farley and his political pundits don't want to overlook any bets. Of course they don't want to "mix politics with misery." The Middle West is fully cognizant of that fact, and sees the bulge in the cheek where the tongue is. The 1934 drought was pretty bad, too, but they don't recall any Governors' conference with the President on that subject that summer. The nearness of election is, of course, just a coincidence.

Alf Landon will not thunder any diatribes or indulge in any heroics from the rear platform of his special train the latter part of this week, as he crosses Nebraska, Iowa and Illinois. He will just act natural and make the only kind of a campaign he knows how to make. It will be in the nature of visits along the road. He will write and make his own speeches, as many willing and eager volunteer speechwriters have already found out. It will be a new flavor in American politics, and the reaction of his audiences will forecast the kind of a campaign that may be expected from now until November.

As he moves on to his native State of Pennsylvania and makes his first topical speech of the campaign, on taxation, the Nation will listen with special attention. Thus far his speeches have necessarily been rather general, but at West Middlesex, his birthplace, he will be specific, and all American voters will want to know just what to expect if he is elected. The acid test of Landon as a candidate is near at hand.

So far as dramatic effect is concerned, it will be a contrast between a brilliant Eastern political showman and a deliberate, sincere prairie man without theatrical gifts. Just how this contrast will affect the average voter is problematical.

Landon Is Compared With Abraham Lincoln.

ALF LANDON is the last to desire a comparison with Abraham Lincoln. But you have to go clear back to Abraham Lincoln to find such a contrast. All other major candidates have been men of the cities, and almost exclusively Eastern cities, at that. Lincoln, for his day, was considered uncouth and awkward and unfitted for the suave ways of the political platform. Illinois, in his day, was considered fully as far outside the pale of smooth politics as is Kansas today.

And so the spotlight will grope around for a time and finally center upon a train as it moves through the gray buffalo grass ranges of eastern Colorado and on to parched wheat-stubble and cornfields of the prairie country this week.

The cool trout streams of Estes Park are a thing of the past to Landon for a long time now. He has a terrific grind ahead of him. Whether he wins or loses, he is followed by a great volume of good wishes, for the people of the Middle West know he is sincere and that he has a definite and constructive purpose in the campaign—that purpose being to make a great effort to restore the confidence of the people in their government at Washington, get rid of useless bureaucracy and boondoggling, get rid of the specter of exorbitant taxes which hovers over them and their children, put 10,000,000 men back to work at real jobs, and pull the country out of its depression jitters.

Former Gov. Allen Reports On British Taxes.

HENRY J. ALLEN, who was Governor of Kansas when Landon was breaking into politics by way of being private secretary to Allen, has been studying English affairs for several years, making trips across the Atlantic for that purpose. He says that if the Government of the United States were to pay as it goes right now the American people would be paying higher taxes than the English, who are supposed to be the highest taxed folks on earth, he produces figures to prove it.

This being true, it would seem like stretching a pretty long bow for the New Dealers to claim that taxes will not be increased, but probably decreased in the future. They have not explained how this can be done while the Government is till spending twice as much as it is taking in.

Anyhow, these campaign promises of lower taxes, made by President Roosevelt, were heard once before—in the campaign of 1932. He also made some other promises in that campaign, it is said. Again it noted a trace of the tongue in the cheek.

I. W. W. Strike Leaders Escorted From County

Pierce, Idaho, Aug. 19 (A.P.).—The removal of several I. W. W. strike leaders by Idaho National Guardsmen from Pierce and Orofino to Lewiston, in another county, was reported here today by lumberjacks.

They said six leaders, including Roy Plumb, chairman of the general strike committee here, and Evan Kryer, who holds a similar position at Orofino, were quietly escorted out of the county yesterday by National Guardsmen under command of Col. S. D. Hays, of Boise.

Col. Hays and county officers declined to discuss the reported development, Hays saying merely he would "have something to say in a couple of days."

Union members would not comment on this latest development in the strike which has paralyzed logging activities in this area since June 26.

Horse Doping Experiments

• • • •

Bounding Bennie—Your commission gave this horse one hypo a half hour before race. Horse walked from paddock backward and tried to climb into patrol judges' wagon. Left barrier in a tangle, slid for home and finished upside down. Comparing result with behavior of horses in many races, we think the dose in this case was too small.

King Waldo II.—Mixed solution known as "Zippo Oil" in oats. The King broke into a lather and tried to shave. Had to be taken to post in a van. Jumped fence immediately after start and ran off grounds and into a drug store, presumably for more dope. He returned to track and finished second. We think he got it and have suspended drug store for balance of meeting.

• • • •

Galloping Gus—Put heroin in the hay of this critter the night before the races. Gus insisted on rising at 5 a. m. so he could get into a yearling race, although 9 years old. In paddock tried to occupy two stalls. Evidently thought he was an entry. Wound up by getting into a steeplechase and jumping into a lake in the belief he was a moose. Maybe he was right.

• • • •

Bertha the Great—Your commission tried a new pill on this filly, having no trouble finding trainers with new pills. She went to the post on her hind legs and when passing bandstand showed desire to play the piano. Tried to play puss-in-the-corner with the track bugler. Broke ahead of the field, but finished last. Stopped in front of clubhouse after race and gave horse laugh to supporters at 8 to 1. Commission will try her tomorrow with mechanical rabbit.

Welfare Unit Asks To Use New Park

C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks, yesterday announced that the Family Service Association has applied for use of the new camp being developed at Chopawamsic, Va., the recreational area which is being promoted by the National Park Service.

Heretofore the Family Service Association, which provides outdoor vacations each year to the Capital's underprivileged mothers and children, has used Camp Good Will, Rock Creek Park.

If the permit is granted, Finnan said, the Camp Good Will site probably will be devoted to picnic grounds. The buildings are no longer fit for use, he asserted.

Standley Opens Offers on Six Destroyers and Three Submarines.

By the Associated Press.

An increase of about 16 per cent in warship construction cost over last year was disclosed yesterday when Admiral William H. Standley, acting Secretary of the Navy, opened bids for building six 1,500-ton torpedoboat destroyers and three 1,350-ton submarines.

The destroyers and submarines—with a similar number to be built in navy yards—comprise the Navy's warship expansion program for 1937.

Already the Navy has 79 war vessels, including 12 submarines and 51 destroyers, under construction, and has sufficient tonnage remaining under treaty provisions to build 32 more destroyers and 8 more submarines before 1942.

The bids opened yesterday will be sent to the Bureau of Construction and Engineering for evaluation, with the expectation that contracts will be awarded to the lowest bidders within two weeks.

The Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, Quincy, Mass., and the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Co., Newport News, Va., submitted the lowest bdis of $4,250,000 each for constructing two destroyers, subject to adjustments for changes in the cost of labor and material while the ships are being built.

That figure is an increase of more than half a million dollars over the $3,675,000 each the Navy is paying for torpedo boat destroyers now under construction.

The Electric Boat Co., Groton, Conn., the only bidder, submitted bids of $3,817,000 for one submarine; $3,183,000 each for two submarines, and $2,907,700 each for three submarines.

Alternate bids, subject to adjustments for labor and material, submitted by the Electric Boat Co. were $3,647,000 for one submarine; $3,037,000 each for two submarines, and $2,770,000 each for three submarines.

Mayflower's Captain

By William Lyon Phelps.

C. Jones.

This is the title of a new book, which I have read with continuous interest. It was written by Henry Justin Smith, of Chicago, and is published by Willett, Clark & Co., of that city.

Mr. Smith died a few months ago, after finishing his book, but before its publication. There is an admirable foreword to this volume, by Prof. Edgar J. Goodspeed, a lifelong friend of Mr. Smith, in which he tells us of the author's scholarship and courage and integrity.

• • • •

He was a first-class newspaper man, and at the time of his death was managing editor of the Chicago Daily News. Now a full-time newspaper editor has no leisure; yet Mr. Smith managed to write a number of valuable books. Mr. Goodspeed pays him this fine tribute:

"How the diffident, fastidious boy we knew could have won his way so quickly to responsibility and success in the tumultuous field of journalism, and that without ceasing to be fastidious and retiring, has always perplexed his old friends. Nor did his heavy burden of newspaper work ever dull the delicacy and sureness of his literary touch. From a hard day's work in the office he turned in the evening to the writing of his books, and to the studies that underlay them, with eagerness and zest."

We have read many volumes about the Pilgrims, and indeed it is impossible to praise too highly their courage and loyalty. But I have never known much about the captain of the Mayflower. He was not one of the Pilgrims, and was not apparently inspired by religious zeal or aspiration. But he was a first-rate seafaring man, who did a tremendously difficult and heart-breaking job magnificently, and it is easily conceivable that if he had been less of a sailor or less of a man, the Mayflower would never have reached the American shores.

• • • •

This book is, so far as I know, his first biography in English. Capt. Christopher Jones was born in Essex, England; came of sailor ancestry; was himself one-fourth owner of the Mayflower, and when he brought her safely across the ocean in that terrible voyage in 1620 he was deep in the vale of years. He had had much experience in the North Sea and with various coasting vessels, and had been along "up Greenland way." But he had never crossed the Atlantic and he never crossed it again. He died not long after he brought the ship back in the spring of 1621, and he has been neglected ever since.

I found this book immensely interesting; it held me from first page to last. It is a book that should be read by every American.

Social Security—and You!

Doubts Voiced About Present Law.

while, nothing approaching these sums will be paid out in benefits. It was estimated that in 1950 benefit payments will amount to only $505,500,000 a year. In other words, payments will not rise to high figures, approaching the income, until most of the present generation of workers reach the age of 65, or die.

It has been estimated that revenues will exceed benefit payments until 1965. By that time it is estimated that the reserve will have reached $36,000,000,000. Even after benefit payments begin to exceed income from taxes, the reserve will continue to grow because of receipt of interest on the money. By 1980 the reserve is expected to reach the huge sum of $47,000,000,000. Even in this day of huge government expenditures, nothing equaling that figure has ever been experienced in the history of this or any other government.

The idea back of this reserve is obvious. The Government is operating just as an insurance company operates—building up a backlog in anticipation of future demands. The insurance plan is intended to be self-sustaining. But there is a vast difference between an insurance company's reserve and the anticipated reserve to be built up by the Government. Insurance companies invest their money in interest and in real estate. Their reserves are really tangible property. The Government can invest its reserves only in its own bonds.

By 1980, it is estimated, benefit payments will reach the sum of $3,500,000,000 annually of wrich only $2,200,000,000 will come from pay roll taxes. Interest is expected to amount to $1,400,000,000 annually. Who will pay the interest? The Government, because it will be interest on its own bonds in which the reserve account has been invested. Where will the Government get this interest? From the only source from which it gets any money—the taxpayer. Thus, some financial experts who have studied the plan feel that it must fall of its own weight. Such a pyramiding of funds has never before been approached by a Ponzi, a Wallingford or a Roosevelt.

Aldrich Views Quoted.

Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the board of the Chase National Bank, who has made a thorough study of the social security plan, says:

"The mental confusion which this arrangement would almost certainly cause might have some unfortunate results. If the old-age reserve account invested its funds in outstanding United States bonds the effect would be equivalent in some respects to a retirement of that amount of the Federal debt. The funds would be returned to the general capital market

"But suppose that, after these bonds were all purchased—or long before that happened—the Government began to issue the special 3 per cent bond to the old-age account as authorized by the new law? Then we should have the appearance of investment without real investment. It would be as if the individual, not knowing what to do with his idle funds after he had bought up his own promissory notes in the hands of others, were to issue new promissory notes to himself for them.

"The Government, crediting taxes to its left-hand pocket, the old-age reserve account, would then turn them over to its right-hand pocket, the general fund, in exchange for crisp new bonds it had itself issued. The purpose of the law in providing for these special bonds is supposedly to make sure that the old-age taxes will be invested in case it is not feasible to buy other Government securities.

Investment Is Problem.

"As the reserve fund in 1980 is expected to be 50 per cent greater than the total present national debt it is easy to see how the framers of the law thought they might eventually run short of outstanding Government bonds for investment. But the device of having the Government issue new bonds to a branch of itself would not invest the money. The Government would still have the old-age tax money in its general fund, and the problem of investment would remain."

Aldrich sees in this situation a great temptation to continually growing Government extravagance. He believes the presence of so much money with no profitable investment possible would lead to the impression that it would be actually necessary to increase the national debt to provide an outlet. If the money that the Government obtains for its special 3 per cent bonds is allowed to remain idle, he feels that it would reduce the buying power of the people and would breed depression.

"But what is more likely," he adds, "is that future Congresses would find all sorts of extravagant appropriations for it."

He anticipates, also, that workers will resent having large sums taken from their incomes, while much smaller amounts are being paid out in benefits. This situation will exist for many years.

Italy's Threat to Assist Rebels Reveals Danger of World War

Mobilization of Airmen in Spanish Crisis Stresses Possibility of Strife There Causing Conflict Between Fascist, Radical Powers.

(Today the eyes of the world are centered on revolution-torn Spain. The dramatic developments of the last two days have increased the danger of the conflict's spreading beyond the country. Will there be another international war? The chief of the foreign service of the Associated Press gives, in the following article, a picture of the situation.—Editor's note.)

New York, Aug. 19.—Italy's threat to aid the Spanish Fascist rebels fully reveals the danger of another world war.

The threat to send the Italian air armada to fight against the Spanish government unless France ceases "openly" aiding the Spanish Socialist government came in an unofficial way, but fits in perfectly with the whole picture.

Spain is the battlefield of Fascism and Liberalism, the latter represented by Socialists and Communists.

Germany and Italy, Fascist countries, would think it dangerous and disastrous if the Spanish government should remain in power, because they are convinced Communists eventually would take charge.

France for Loyalists.

They fear communism would be strengthened in France, civil war occur there and western Europe become a ferment of socialism, communism and anarchism which the Fascist countries would deem dangerous to their dictatorial governments.

Whatever the truth, France and Communist Russia anxiously and openly hope Spain's Socialist liberal government will win and crush fascism, still a threat in France.

This is the thirty-third day of the Spanish rebellion. Four-fifths of the army is fighting with the Fascist rebels. The Socialist government has only the remaining one-fifth of regular troops and an improvised, ill-trained militia. It is the organized army against the embattled citizenry.

Spain became a republic in 1931 because the people revolted against what they termed intolerable control by the King's courtiers, priests and landowners.

For five years Spain has struggled to find herself, each new government disappointing the country.

Even Split in Vote.

Finally, elections last February showed an almost even division between all brands of Liberals and all brands of Fascists, landowners, soldiers and moderates.

The apparent evenness of the present fighting indicates there is no overwhelming desire of the whole people for either fascism or mixed communism and socialism. At present the rebels appear to have a slight edge over the government.

The world fight between fascism and liberalism, stewing for years, brought into being Fascist Italy and Nazi Germany.

It also brought Communist Russia and Socialist France.

A score of small nations divided in the same way, but the "big four" furnish the danger of war, the ability to wage it and the evident willingness to start another world conflict if their political systems are threatened.

Japan's Soaring Exports Linked To Low Prices

Industrialization of Far East Has Come to Stay, Economist Asserts.

By the Associated Press.

Yosemite, Calif., Aug. 19.—Japan's spectacular rise as an exporter is linked, probably permanently, to a system of low selling prices and low wages, two British economists told the Institute of Pacific Relations today.

A paper by Prof. G. E. Hubbard, of the Royal Institute of International Affairs, and Denzil Baring, of the British delegation, predicted the Japanese would be able to maintain their position in the world's cotton trade only through "very low selling prices."

"There is not likely to be a substantial rise in the level of Japanese wages," they reported, "first, because with the growing population the supply of labor probably will outrun the demand, and secondly, because the close link between the agriculturists and factory workers acts as a drag upon factory wages."

They also argued the unpromising prospects of a recovery in the silk trade and a reduction in the general demand for cotton goods "point to the likelihood of Japan swinging over to the export of other classes of manufactures to a greater extent than before."

The paper said since 1928 Japan's cotton production has increased 34 per cent and her steel production 55 per cent, while in the United States steel production declined 34 per cent, in France 30 per cent and in Great Britain 20 per cent.

"The general conclusion drawn," said the paper, "is that the industrialization of India and the Far East has come to stay and indeed all the portents are that it will continue to increase.

"The problem with which the western world is faced is that of peaceful adjustment of the new conditions which have arisen."

Tammany Hall Strife Is Ended After Fisticuffs

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 19.—A brief flurry of fisticuffs appeared tonight to have cleared the air at Tammany Hall.

After an exchange of blows between two elderly district leaders, it was announced by the executive committee that harmony had been restored after several days of dissension growing out of the continued absence of James J. Dooling, Tammany leader, who has been ill.

The fist fight occured between William P. Kenneally, chairman of the executive committee, and Christopher D. Sullivan, Dooling ally. They had gathered at the hall with 30 other district leaders to discuss a threatened revolt against Dooling's leadership.

"We were talking together and I may have pushed him," Sullivan explained when they posed together for photographers after the fight. "We didn't mean anything by it. We have known each other for 40 years and are like brothers."

Previously, Kenneally had voiced resentment at the naming of a triumvirate by Dooling to guide the wigwam's affairs during his illness. Sullivan is a member of the temporary board of strategy, the appointment of which had aroused other members besides Kenneally.

After the meeting, however, Secretary Bert Stand said:

"The executive committee unanimously agreed to respect Mr. Dooling's wishes as regards the appointment of the committee named by him."

McSwain Wills Tracts To County, Boy Scouts

He offered the city of Union a park tract for $1,500.

The Representative concluded his will by recommending that his descendants "study nature, mankind, and good books."

WHAT PHYSICAL AND MENTAL FATIGUE DOES TO MEN PAST 40

Many men at 40, in perfect health, without an ache or pain, wonder why they aren't as strong and as vigorous as they were 5 or 10 years ago. Mental and physical fatigue is the cause in the majority of cases. Fortunately this condition can be helped by the use of a recently discovered hormone. This hormone stimulates the glandular system to greater activity—helps build up lowered vitality.

This hormone is now available, together with other valuable ingredients in Sexalb Tablets (Blue Box for men—Orange Box for women) and are sold and recommended by all modern druggists. Ex-ab is the formula of a distinguished American physician who has written a booklet called "For Men Who Want to Live," a copy of which will be sent in a plain sealed envelope by Ex-ab Co., 56 W. 45th St. N. Knox Assails Government 'Partisanship' Among Varied Groups in Economic Field

He Urges System Based Upon Free Enterprise

By the Associated Press.

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 19.—The text of the speech here tonight by Col. Frank Knox, Republican Vice Presidential nominee, before the convention of the United Retail Merchants Association of Maryland, West Virginia, Virginia and Pennsylvania follows:

"I am grateful to Gov. Nice for his generous references to me, although conscious that I do not deserve all of them in full measure, nevertheless, I reciprocate his friendly sentiments and am proud to appear on this platform with him, realizing that his State of Maryland has always been foremost in the battle for human rights and has been in the habit of electing its foremost citizens to the high office of Governor. I congratulate both the State of Maryland and Gov. Nice on their official relationship at this time.

"Permit me to pause a moment to pay my personal tribute to another great American. While he was my political opponent, nevertheless on all fundamental issues now before this Nation, including constitutionalism, State's rights, economy and efficiency in government, individual liberty, and in opposition to religious, racial and class hatred of every kind, I am confident that he would today, had he lived, been speaking the same ideas in the same language. I refer to Albert C. Ritchie, whose passing has been a loss to the whole Nation.

You are one of the great agencies in American economic life. You are the instrument through which the huge output of our fields and factories is distributed to 130,000,000 consumers. You exercise a great and useful function. It is an unhappy fact that this function is not everywhere clearly understood. There are many who see the farmer and the manufacturer as more useful than the merchant. They see the merchant as a mere unproductive middleman.

This is a misconception of our economic system. It is part only of a larger misconception that has done much evil in our time. That is the tendency toward economic antagonism among the great producing groups in our economic system. This system is a great machine for the production and distribution of goods and services. This machine is not made up of unrelated and independent parts. It is made up of interlocking parts. Each one contributes to the total output. The miner, the farmer, the workingman, the manufacturer, the banker, the merchant, the railway—all these are useful and indispensable parts in this great economic machine. They are partners. Each one adds his share to production, and should have his share in the product. Whenever one of these partners is ill-rewarded or depressed, the whole economic life of the country is depressed. When the factory worker is unemployed, the farmer suffers. When the farmers are in distress, our banks fail and our railroads are bankrupted.

'Tendency Toward Group Hatred.'

In the face of these simple economic truths the fundamental partnership of labor and trade and agriculture and industry is not everywhere recognized. There has been a growing tendency toward group rivalry, group hatred, and group legislation. There has even been a tendency on the part of government to take sides and to pass legislation favoring one group at the expense of the others. Not so long ago a high government official urged a political alliance between workers and farmers to take over the government of this Nation.

Such a proposal is monstrous. It is un-American. The fomenting of class hatreds in this fashion leads to disaster. In self-defense every occupational group is forced to organize and fight every other group. It makes us a nation of armed camps, snarling and fighting to obtain special advantage from government. This is not the American way. In Europe this tendency has developed into class strife, revolutions, and dictatorships.

In our economic system of free enterprise there is an automatic direction of industry and trade. In the main the rewards of each group are in proportion to its contribution to the product. Automatically society determines what group should survive, what parts of the machine must be altered. If a producer makes a poor commodity, his competitor gets his market. If a storekeeper carried poor goods, his competitor gets his customers. If a farmer grows the wrong things, another farmer gets his sales. And under this system America produces the greatest output of wealth, pays the highest rate of wages, gives the finest standard of living, in the history of the world.

This economic system of ours is founded on free enterprise. It works, even in depression. It does not break down, although it may be badly wounded by a world depression. It is the only system that will work. We have been giving the other system a trial. We have tried Government regimentation, and we shall be years recovering from the experiment. We tried Government control of industry, and it delayed recovery. We tried cracking down on business, and it paralyzed investment.

Cites Starvation Of Cattle in Fields.

We tried to control farm production, and cattle starved in the fields. We plowed up cotton, and thousands of cotton workers went on relief. We paid farmers not to grow wheat, and had to import millions of bushels to get bread. We paid rich sugar corporations in Hawaii millions of dollars not to grow sugar, and had to import millions of pounds from foreign sugar-growers.

What is the lesson from all this? It is a simple one. It is the lesson that the business of this country cannot be run from Washington. It is the lesson that a million and a half retailers knew better how to run the mercantile business of the country than one bureaucrat in Washington, even an Army general. It is the lesson that not even a brain-truster can tell when a drought is coming.

Do you remember the President's re-employment agreement, forced on more than 2,000,000 employers in the frenzy of 1933? This was the agreement that was to put 6,000,000 men back at work in six months. If the terms of that one-sided agreement had been enforced it would almost certainly have closed up half the small shops, the small businesses, and the small industries in the country. Only the big fellows could have lived under it.

When our present machine system started in this country about a hundred years ago men worked 72 hours a week. Women and little children worked the same hours, or longer. But now men work 48 hours or 40 hours or less. The wages they now receive buy just four times as much as they bought at the beginning. The American working man works just two-thirds as long for just four times the wage he got in the beginning of this system. This is the most wonderful advance in human betterment in the history of the world. It was made entirely without a New Deal.

It is high time that we should abandon this foolish notion that government can direct industry and control production and guarantee profits and insure wages. Let me outline, very briefly and very simply, my idea of the relation of the National Government to our business affairs.

It is not possible tonight to discuss the many individual duties and powers of our Federal Government. There are vitally important functions which the Constitution assigns to the National Government. There are other functions which the National Government exercises jointly with the States. There are certain activities of great importance to the Nation that cannot be left to private enterprise, such as the postal service. The activity of our National Government in these many fields is a matter of absorbing interest to the Nation, but it must be left to a later discussion. Here we are concerned with the relation of government to business. And I tell you that in this relation the primary function of government is regulation. This regulation should not be aimed at the control and direction of private enterprise. Its objective should be to make enterprise fair. It should attempt to guarantee fair play. Where one partner in our economic order is at a hopeless disadvantage, it is proper for the Government to step in and equalize the conditions of competition. Depositors in banks are not always able to know the condition of their banks. It is proper for the Government to regulate in their protection. Natural monopoly has very special advantages. It is proper to regulate such monopolies. Artificially created monopoly which extorts unreasonable profits is uneconomic and unsound. It is proper to break them up. The buyer of securities cannot always tell what is back of the securities. It is proper to regulate in his interest. With the great tides of economic and social change in our time there will be new forms of Federal regulation. But whatever forms it takes, it must be within the frame work of the Constitution.

Suggests Study Of Constitution.

Even where regulation is clearly desirable, it is a very vital question whether it is a matter for Federal regulation or for local regulation by the States. It is a splendid idea to look at the Constitution before you undertake to regulate business by Federal law. It will save a lot of embarrassment later. The Constitution is surprisingly clear on this matter, and any administration that does not look at the Constitution occasionally is going to be surprised. In fact our present Administration has been surprised eight times in two years.

Nobody knows just what the Robinson-Patman bill means to the retailer and to the consumer. It may be well meant. It may be intended to make competition fairer. But it gives the Federal Government enormous power over every retail business in America. It may turn out to be oppressive or confiscatory. In such case the Constitution is our refuge.

The American people do not concern themselves often over technical matters of the Constitution. But they have a sturdy common sense that sees very clearly when Government is misusing its powers. For a time the American people were hypnotized by the idea that the Government could do everything, from solving the problem of poverty to growing trees in a desert. But they did not stay hypnotized. They have begun to wonder if plowing up cotton is a proper activity of the Federal Government. They have decided that a Government that makes even little pigs flee for their lives is a peculiar kind of Government. They have decided that farming by affidavit is a funny sort of farming. They have decided that growing potatoes in your backyard is not a matter of Federal jurisdiction. You might under certain circumstances let your wife advise you about growing potatoes, but you draw the line at a man from Washington.

They have decided that the National Government does not have to build a dog-pound in Memphis, Tenn., with marble shower baths. It is not that they object to a dog having a shower bath. The people believe in washing dogs. But they would like to see their National Government devote less time to dog-pounds and more time to balancing the national budget. I see in the papers where the Government has approved a $6,000 project in White Plains, N. Y. to remove "efflorescence" from some bridges. They seem to like big words at Washington, all the way down. But it would be better if they spent less time removing "efflorescence" and more time studying the currency situation.

Whatever the activities of our Federal Government, there are three simple standards which should govern its conduct of national affairs. The people want these standards observed. They are entitled to have them. The first of these standards is simplicity. We cannot go back to those simple times when Thomas Jefferson ate his breakfast, got on his horse, and rode to the White House to be inaugurated. But we should not have the endless confusion and complexity, and milling around and general hullabaloo that now characterize our National Government. We want fewer laws and better laws.

"Government Needs More Simplicity.'

Simplicity of Government means that the Federal Government leaves individuals alone. Within the last three years our Government has signed individual contracts with about 3,000,000 employers in trade and industry. It has made individual contracts with something under 4,000,000 farmers. It has made individual contracts with hundreds of thousands more. It is now struggling with a dubious social security measure which will require the Federal Government to go into the intimate details of the private lives of about 30,000,000 more. They will follow these individuals from childhood to death, and then ask some more questions of the surviving relatives. That is not simplicity in government.

Second, there should be economy in government. This is not a debatable issue. Taxes must be raised to pay for the increasing activities of the Federal Government. For those many things that the Government must do there must be payment. The people should bear this burden cheerfully and patriotically, whether it be to pay for the deficit in Mr. Farley's postal system or for the salaries of Congressmen. Taxation for the proper expenditures of Government is personally a burden, but it is a burden that must be borne. But every tax is a net subtraction from private industry or private consumption. Taxation properly imposed is a necessary evil, but taxation to support governmental waste, extravagances or experiment is an unnecessary evil. When taxes are devoted to useless projects or unnecessary public officials they represent sheer economic loss to the people. Even when they are devoted to useful governmental projects, they are subtracted from the living and the production of the people.

We hear much discussion of the usefulness of various public expenditures. No public expenditure is ever justified until it can be shown that the governmental project is worth more to the people than the total they would have got with the money if they had been allowed to keep it. When Government takes taxes from the poor to build a community poultry house in New Jersey, the expenditure is not justified by this test. Nowadays three-fifths of all Federal taxes come from taxes on the working masses of the people. Six years ago the cost of government in the United States, national and local, was one-seventh of the entire income of all the people. Last year it was one-fourth. A continuation of this progressive encroachment of governmental expense on national income will mean that in the end one-half the people will be supporting themselves and the other half as well. It cannot continue. It leads inevitably to Government insolvency or to currency inflation or to communism.

Governmental extravagance leads to bureaucracy and bureaucracy leads to governmental extravagance. History is strewn with examples of nations that ate out their economic hearts with bureaucracies. A government bureau is like a camel. His head once in the tent the devil himself cannot keep the rest of him out. And when he is in the tent, the owner is out. I am informed that there are now in Washington three separate and independent commissions working at taxpayers' expense to find out why there are so many unnecessary commissions. There should be shortly another commission to find out what these three have been doing.

Third, this Nation should have certainty in government. Our economic order rests on confidence. The banker must be confident of the soundness of the currency he deals in. The merchant must be confident of the inviolability of the contracts he makes with his producers and his customers. The manufacturer must be confident that his estimated costs will not be arbitrarily changed by Government action. The farmer must be confident that Government will not artificially destroy his prospective markets. The investor must be confident that his Government will not confiscate his returns. Above all, the plain man who provides most of the capital which supports industry must be confident that his little savings will not be wiped out by governmental action.

Our competitive system exposes us all to heavy hazards of life. We all must face competition and changing demand and failure of markets and climatic uncertainties. These hazards are the common lot of men. Man has faced them through the countless ages, with a courage and ingenuity that have built a wonderful civilization. It is asking too much to demand that he face year after year the additional unnecessary hazards of arbitrary and unannounced governmental regimentation. A philosophy of "try anything once" is not even sound for a tin-horn gambler. In due time he will go broke. But for a sovereign government of a great nation a philosophy of try anything once is intolerable.

For the past three years all American business has lived in the shadow of fear and uncertainty. Business men cannot create recovery when they have to spend their time reading the papers to see what happened to them the day before in Washington. There is lying stagnant in this country today a vast pool of idle capital funds. It is a store of capital so vast that it would alone suffice to supply the capital needs of many a foreign nation. It lies stagnant because of fear. Give business men some assurance that there will be no further violent and sudden interferences with the vital implements of industrial enterprise, and our whole economic life will burst into a vigor never known before. Recovery will become a fact instead of a debate. But it must not be just a breathing spell. It must be a moratorium.

Our American economic system is not a perfect system. It has some weakness, some faults, some ugly sports. It has risks. But it happens to be the greatest and richest economic system in the history of the world. It has within itself the God-given faculty of curing its own ills, remedying its own defects, wiping out its own injustices. Not even a World War followed by a world depression could kill it. Not even mistakes of government can maim it permanently. It has one precious characteristic that is almost peculiar to it. In nearly all the other large nations of the world this characteristic has been destroyed. It still has a ladder of success with just one rule. Any man may climb it who is first to put his foot on the bottom rung. The United States is the one great economic democracy of all times. We must not let mistakes of government tear it down.

Assails Democrats

COL. FRANK KNOX.

Knox in Virginia.

Grand Caverns, Va., Aug. 19 (AP).—Col. Frank Knox, Republican Vice Presidential candidate, declared here today that Virginia was "debatable territory" and that chances for a Republican victory in the national election were "better than equal."

The Chicago publisher stopped here for a tour of the caverns and lunch en route from White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., to Hagerstown, Md., where he was scheduled to speak tonight.

"There is a very definite swing of farmers toward Mr. Landon," Knox said, "especially in the Midwest. Four years ago Republicans were victims of a psychological movement to get rid of 'old administrations.' Now it is 'get rid of the New Deal.'"

He predicted a "tremendous increase in Republican votes in Virginia" next November.

"A lot of people in Virginia who are historically Democrats openly decline to support the present Administration and will stay away from the polls or support Mr. Landon," Knox asserted.

Lose Big Hips Fat Stomachs Double Chins

Lose Fat The Easy Way—Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Bending and Rolling Exercises.

There is no mystery about this method. Doctors have been prescribing it for years. It is based on a scientific discovery of the medical profession that excess fat in many cases is caused by a little gland that does not work well.

Every drop of our blood goes through this tiny gland sixteen times a day. It produces about one and one-half drops of vital fluid every 24 hours. The action of this fluid on the blood is much the same as the action a good draft has on the burning of coal in a furnace. It turns on the "draft" that increases the speed with which food and fatty tissues "burn up".

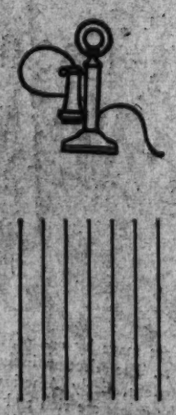
If this gland doesn't pour out about one and one-half drops of its vital fluid a day, many people take on fat.

Doctors find a simple easy way to remedy this condition is to feed this gland the substance it lacks. Then, many people get rid of the excess flesh that swells out their figures in ugly bumps and lumps.

Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on this same method so generally used by modern doctors. Millions are using them with success. They are prepared by a world-famous medical laboratory. Their formula is given in every package so you know what you're taking.

For 23 years millions of fat people have found Marmola Prescription Tablets effective for the reduction of ugly fat. Don't take chances with starvation diets or back-breaking exercises. Get a box of Marmola from your druggist today.

BEWARE of Long Distance Telephone Calls From Brokers and Investment Houses UNKNOWN TO YOU



The appearance of this advertisement in these columns is evidence that this newspaper co-operates with and supports the Better Business Bureau for your protection.

Recent information received by the Better Business Bureau indicates increased activity by high-pressure operators dealing in securities of a questionable nature. In fact, the Bureau is informed that three such houses will open in Canada in the very near future, and that the long-distance telephone will be their chief method of solicitation.

Of course, the "sell and switch" scheme will be their principal plan—so BEWARE of it. Be cautious in dealing with investment houses of which you never heard. Whenever you are considering buying unlisted securities, remember

Aid at Embassy Is Host To Visiting Japanese

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Capt. Tamon Yamaguchi, naval attache of the Japanese Embassy, yesterday afternoon was host at a reception at the Mayflower Hotel in honor of the commander, Vice Admiral Zengo Yoshida, and officers of the Imperial Japanese Training Squadron.

Guests passed groups of midshipmen in their white uniforms all the way through the lobby of the Chinese room, in which Capt. Yamaguchi and the guests of honor received. The midshipmen, however, were not present at the affair. The band from the Imperial Training Squadron played at the entrance of the reception room, some music that of their own country and some American, including familiar airs of the Civil War period.

The gold and white of naval uniforms were everywhere in evidence. Light summer dresses of the women present added color to the picture. The tea table, with its minnature red-roofed Japanese pagodas and great silver tea urn vases of gladioli, white lilies and white hydrangeas, formed the artistic background.

The Ambassador of Japan, Mr. Hirosi Saito, who returned from Virginia Beach to attend the functions for his countrymen, was among the guests as was the Counselor of Embassy, Mr Seijiro Yoshazawa. Mme. Saito remained at the beach, but Mme. Yoshizawa arrived home last night, although too late for the reception.

Greetings by Admiral.

Admiral William H. Standley, Acting Secretary of the Navy, who had extended official greetings to the visitors in the morning, remarked laughingly as he shook hands with Mr. Yoshizawa: "We just meet again, all day long."

Dr. Stanley K. Hornbeck, chief of the Far Eastern Affairs division of the State Department, was among the guests, as were Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol. Mrs. Bristol in a figured chiffon gown in black and white with which she wore a strand of jade beads and a black hat with a bit of green in the trimming. She and Admiral Bristol have been in the capital all summer, although they had planned to leave June 25 and have looked forward to going every week-end since. They are leaving tomorrow—or at least hope to, says Mrs. Bristol—to spend the week-end in Westchester, N. Y., and from there they may go up into New England.

They were greeted warmly by Rear Admiral and Mrs. A. B. Cooke, who have come to Washington recently. Admiral Cooke was recalling to Mrs. Bristol their meetings in Constantinople, where Admiral Bristol was high commissioner for eight years, and Mrs. Bristol was a leader in the diplomatic set of the Turkish capital.

Mrs. Cooke was becomingly gowned in a red tailored dress, with which she wore a wide-brimmed hat.

Commander Roscoe E. Schuirmann, aid to Admiral Standley, was accompanied by Mrs. Schuirmann, who wore a white chiffon with blue polka dots and a large straw hat trimmed with flowers.

The former Air Attache of the Spanish Embassy, Maj. Ramon Franco, was among the guests, accompanied by Senora de Franco, who wore a large black hat and a black flowered print dress.

Tells of Vacation.

Rear Admiral Robert Wittoeft-Emden, naval attache of the German Embassy, was telling friends how he enjoyed the vacation in California, from which he recently returned. His other trips there have been on business; this time it was just a holiday and an enjoyable one. Capt. John Stapler, U. S. N.; Rear Admiral Rowcliff, Capt. H. D. Hansen and Mrs. Hansen also were among the guests.

Mrs. Hansen, who wore a white crepe dress with a gay vest of a red-figured print and a large hat, was one of a small group being entertained by Lieut. Comdr. Takashi Kanoye, aid and flag secretary of the squadron. Lieut. Comdr. Kanoye explained his name is really Kanoe, but he prefers to spell it with a "y" because otherwise, in English, it sounds like canoe.

Not only he, but all the other officers and the midshipmen speak English, he said, and the midshipmen will act as guides when the Vice Admiral is "at home" aboard ship on Saturday afternoon in Baltimore.

Among prominent Japanese who were present aside from those in official and diplomatic circles, was Mr. Hajime Murayama, distinguished artist of the National Geographic Society, and Miss Shio Sakanaishi, who is in charge of the Japanese Division at the Library of Congress.

Among other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Evans, the latter wearing a figured print gown in shades of rose beige and brown, and a large hat; Mr. and Mrs. Willard Morris, the latter in a dress of blue with a white figure; Dr. and Mrs. Frank Bunker, Mrs. Bunker in a striking white gown and hat; Col. and Mrs. Ralph Mallett, Capt. and Mrs. William D. Puleston, Maj. Gen. Kenji Matsumoto, Military Attache of the Japanese Embassy; the Second Secretary of the Japanese Embassy and Mme. Katsuo Okazaki, the latter wearing a black dress and a wide black hat; the Naval Attache of the Embassy, Commander Yamaguchi, who is no relation to Capt. Yamaguchi, although their names are the same, and Lieut. Comdr. Kanzo Mura, Assistant Naval Attache, who was in charge of arrangements for the reception.

A dinner followed the reception. This afternoon the Acting Secretary of the Navy will be host to the visitors at a reception at the Mayflower and Ambassador Saito will entertain for the officers of the squadron at a private dinner at the embassy this evening.

Wilson, chief of the Division of Foreign Service Personnel; Mr. Mehmet Munir Ertegun, Ambassador of Turkey; Mr. V. A. L. Son of Washington Couple and Granddaughter of Late Col. Thomasson, of Chicago, Married at Home of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Thomasson in Oakland.

Monte Vista, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Thomasson in Oakland, Md., was the scene of the wedding last night of their niece, Miss Nelle Thornton Offutt, daughter of Mrs. Charles Ellwood Offutt, of Hazelhurst, in Oakland, to Mr. Frederic Francis Chesley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Willoughby Sprigg Chesley, of Washington.

The ceremony was performed at 8 o'clock by the Rev. David C. Trimble. The dining room was transformed into a small chapel for the marriage service, with tall floor candelabra forming an aisle for the bridal procession. Only candlelight was used inside the house and a profusion of garden flowers were the decorations. Outside, electric flood lights illuminated the pools and gardens. The music was provided by an orchestra.

The bride was given in marriage by her uncle and wore the wedding dress of her mother. The gown was of white satin, covered with tulle and was made with short puff sleeves of lace and a lace bertha around the neck. Her lace veil was given her by the bridegroom's mother, who had worn it at her wedding. She carried an old-fashioned bouquet of roses and in her hair had a wreath of orange blossoms which had been worn by her mother, her grandmother and her great-grandmother as well as clusters which had been made for her mother of pearl.

Mrs. Haymond Rapp, her matron of honor, wore light green chiffon, made in empire style, with short puff sleeves, and carried on one arm a hat filled with nasturtiums in different shades of yellow. Miss Katherine Murphy, her maid of honor, wore a gown of a darker shade of green chiffon, made like that of the matron of honor, and carried a hat filled with nasturtiums in darker shades.

The bride, who is a granddaughter of the late Col. Nelson Thomasson, of Chicago, attended the Master's School at Dobbs Ferry. The bridegroom attended the Georgia Institute of Technology.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

During Miss Haworth's absence on vacation her mail is being answered by proxy. Miss Haworth will return to her desk August 24.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a young man, 19 years of age, deeply in love with a charming young lady of 18. I am an atheist; the young lady, a devout Christian. Recently I spoke in no uncertain terms of my disbelief in her religion. She immediately took offense, stating that she would not permit anyone to speak disrespectfully of her convictions. Her attitude from that time on changed.

* * * *

Instead of remaining the charming, lovable person I had known, she became haughty, cold and apparently very much disinterested in me. Do you really think she is simply using good common sense by not encouraging my affection for her, or that she is making this particular disagreement an excuse for severing our friendship? Frankly I do not know what to make of her attitude. ANXIOUS.

Silence Is Wisdom.

DEAR ANXIOUS: If you are, as you say, deeply in love with the young lady, you were most unwise in declaring yourself an atheist and in speaking slightingly of her religion. I can easily understand how she would take offense and change her attitude toward you. Since she is a devout Christian and you have stated your disbelief in no uncertain terms, I think this would be a bone of contention between you, even if your friendship were not completely severed. Most persons can build a bridge of affection across any conflicting opinion—except the one that pertains to belief and disbelief in God.

* * * *

I suspect, however, that in voicing your ideas on this matter you were much more eager to start an argument than to state your convictions. At your age many young men plough a tortuous path through a field of doubt about religious belief. Most of them, however, realize it is best to keep their counsel—particularly in the presence of persons who have already accepted the faith of our forefathers. I advise you not to dilate on your atheistic (or agnostic) leanings until you have lived long enough to be sure about what you believe. Wisdom does not always come with age, but chances are you will change your opinions many times, about many things, in the years to come. Why don't you express the possibility of this to the young lady you love?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am boarding in a house where three men and four women are staying. I am 21 years old. Recently, on two occasions one of the young men has knocked at my door and asked if he could come in and talk with me, or bring sandwiches into my room to eat them with me. Both times I have refused, thinking it would be best not to receive a male caller in my bedroom. Other boarders here seem to think I am prudish. One woman assured me there would be nothing wrong in the man coming into my room to keep me company. What do you think? G. S.

You Were Right.

DEAR G. S.: You were entirely right in not encouraging the man to visit you in your room. It is a matter of etiquette, rather than of morals. Modern authorities on what is proper may blink at many things that would have shocked our grandmothers, but they still insist a woman's boudoir should not be her reception room.

She Will Help You.

DEAR F. M. D.: I have talked with Miss Frances Littman, director of the Peter Pan School and Kindergarten, at 1604 Park road, about you. Call her at Adams 2734. She will help you.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I would like very much to keep during the day, without charge, some small child, or baby, whose mother is employed. I have no children of my own, and I would enjoy occupying my leisure time in that way. Could you refer me to some nursery school or some person who might help me? F. M. D.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Too Little Thyroid.

In our chats about endocrine glands the thyroid has been mentioned frequently. We must now consider how a failure of this gland to function up to normal will affect health.

First of all there is a rather extreme type of thyroid deficiency known as myxedema, which as a rule has an insidious onset. Mentally the patient is slow and dull, and the memory is bad. Movements are deliberate, the skin is dry and rough, and the entire body appears gross and bulky. It is caused by a waisting away of the gland and sometimes appears as a result of the surgical removal of this structure necessitated by disease. This is quite in contrast with Graves' disease or toxic thyroid, in which more thyroid substance is being produced than the body can stand.

In most persons there is an in-between state in which just enough thyroid product is elaborated and not too much. Nevertheless there may appear a chain of symptoms—far too infrequently recognized—that can scarcely be termed myxedema. They develop whenever there is a slight drop in the output of this gland. The condition is known as hypothyroidism and the body is actually starved—not to an extreme but to a minor degree—for a small amount of a very important chemical.

Most of these subjects appear perfectly well. They are thin, stout, or medium, as the case may be, and the pulse rate offers no diagnostic aid. The only test that can guide us with certainty is that which is known as the metabolic rate determination. On repeated examinations this may show a reading of 10 to 15 points below normal.

Why is this important? In the first place, if the gland is not secreting quite up to par certain other endocrines may not be showing their normal level of output. The thyroid is an accurate governor of the activities of the body. It establishes the rate at which oxygen is used, and when it is correct the individual is generally alert, active and capable of ready response. Whenever a patient finds himself listless, unduly fatigued, or slowly increasing in weight despite a regulated diet, if the eyes are expressionless and puffy, if he shuns muscular activity in any form, a basal metabolic test is called for.

Play in Heat Of Doubtful Help to Child

Outdoor Exercise Should Be Early in Morning or Late Afternoon.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

FEW experiences are more uncomfortable and wretched than taking the children out walking in the city on hot summer days. Yet the parks and streets are full of tired children and exhausted mothers dutifully getting fresh air and exercise.

The benefits of such excursions are doubtful. To be sure the children grow brown, which at least proves that they are having sunlight to build them up against the dull winter months. They are also, however, getting the full benefit of dust and poisonous gas, and generally come home with frazzled nerves.

People who cannot get away in summer might at least reorganize their lives and change their schedules. The north temperate zone in this country is tropical during the summer months, and to try to live in it by the schedule which applies during the winter is absurd.

The time to go out is in the early morning and late afternoon. From 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. should, on the hot days, be spent indoors.

Housework need not be done directly breakfast is over. No one suffers if these chores are delayed.

If mother and children take their walk from 8 until 10, marketing as they go, the baby will be ready for his bath and nap when they come home, and with him out of the way the housework will go twice as fast as when he is about.

If curtains and rugs and ornaments have been stowed away for the summer, the housework is further simplified.

Even the cooking can be made easier, for fruits and salads instead of puddings and cooked vegetables are easy to prepare and good for both young and old.

Black Crepe Makes Fall Debut

Youth, the theme of American designers is smartly expressed in this slenderizing frock of black crepe. A high hat, calfskin bag with cobbler stitching and doeskin gloves, are chic accessories in tune with the mode.

Frock for Fall Transition Should Be Black Silk Crepe

Cut Should Be on New Slim Lines With High Neck, Long Sleeves and Some Form of Shoulder Detail.

By Ethel Ehlen.

By The Post Fashion Editor.

AS ATTRACTIVE and comfortable as summer clothes are, they seem quite jaded and declasse at this time of the year, particularly when the shops start showing the new fall creations. For that delightful transition, late summer to fall, the choice of the introductory frock is of paramount importance.

It should be black silk crepe; cut along the new slim and swing lines; have a high neck; long sleeves; trimmed with buttons, either fore or aft; be short of skirt and characterized by some sort of shoulder detail.

Youth is the season's theme song in fashions—youthful lines accented by an air of vitality and animation. After viewing the market showings in New York, from the most exclusive designers through a cross-section of the entire market district, I am convinced that all women this fall and winter are going to look young and beautiful. There is no alternative — American designers, the majority of them young as well as clever, have decided that the feminine population shall be youthfully swank.

Line and fabric vie for leadership and seem to share equal honors. The first is important when introducing a new silhouette and the second equally as important for interpreting current trends and influences. Flares, tunics and capes give an atmosphere of graceful movement of the body and produce charm with chic. Everything has been done to flatter the figure and molded contours are omnipresent. So as not to interefere with walking and at the same time not detract from the slenderizing effects, many of the skirts are slit up either side several inches.

Silk materials are both dull and shiny, plain and patterned (self-color), but always, the texture is soft and pliable. Even fabrics having a heavier appearance are surprisingly sheer, and lend themselves expertly to all of the vagaries of the styling field. Smooth and nubby surfaces are sponsored by the mode and sometimes at a distance it is difficult to know whether a frock is silk or sheer wool.

Shoulders are up and away—the broadened shoulderline usually being effected by a series of pleats at the top of the sleeve. The lower sleeve may fit the arm like a glove fits the hand, or be loose, flowing gracefully over the wrists. The tiny, high collars which are a must this season are either just a narrow band, often piped wth a bit of white, or a perky little turnover. Belts are form-fitting, emphasizing the demand for slender waistlines; of self-material or leather, with inconspicious or dramatic buckles. Pockets are everywhere—on bodices and skirts in twos or fours. Buttons parade down front, sides or backs of frocks by the dozens.

While it is definitely a black season, numerous colors are also on the scene to lend variety to the fashion picture. Although black is considered the smartest color to wear, a bit of tint is absolutely necessary in a wardrobe to avoid monotony. Green is tremendously popular—dark, soft greens, such as spruce moss and olive; all of the wine shades are sponsored, from bright to the deepest reds; rich browns are good and there is a decided tendency to combine the greens and browns.

Well Dressed Termed Style Plus Quality

By Hope Ridings Miller.

"EVERY woman should dress well whether she can afford it or not," once stated Gertrude Atherton, the novelist.

But dressing well depends on a lot more than knowing what they're wearing this season, and what colors are most becoming to one's hair and eyes. It takes into account quality as well as cut of dress or coat; use as well as cost, and workmanship as well as design—according to Miss Clarice Scott, assistant specialist in the textile and clothing division of the U. S. Bureau of Home Economics, who has made a special study of the problems confronting Milady bent on buying a coat or a dress, and has compiled some leaflet-guides along this line.

Yesterday as she discussed factors to be considered by the woman who wants to be well-dressed on the least amount of money, she stressed that "Good quality clothes last longer, look better and are more comfortable to wear."

Suitability Primary.

"Whether a dress is a good or bad buy depends, of course, on the quality of the fabric and its suitability to your particular needs. For example, a filmy fabric may be a wise purchase in an afternoon or evening dress, but in an office dress it is impractical. For such a garment you would do better to get a sturdy material made especially for hard wear and tailored styles."

Among other points to be considered in buying a dress Miss Scott mentioned these:

A label that tells what kind of fibers make up the material, and gives definite information about shrinkage and color fastness.

Staple fabrics rather than novelties, for economy.

Full cut of dress with plenty of room. "Examine the sleeves and the back of the waist particularly," she advised. "See that they are cut lengthwise of the material, rather than crosswise. A good-quality dress is always full-cut."

Try on a dress before you buy, even though it is only a house dress. Size labels are no assurance of fit.

Notice the seams. A good-quality garment has no more seams than are really needed for good fit and for working out the particular design.

In a good-quality dress the seams are wide and are finished so there is no danger of pulling out and fraying during wear and cleaning.

Buying a coat requires even more careful attention to details, according to Miss Scott, "because a dress is generally bought for one season or one year. A coat represents a larger outlay of money and must stand all kinds of weather for three or four years."

What Coat to Choose.

Whether a woman decides on an all-purpose, a sports or a dressy coat must be determined, of course, by her needs, Miss Scott said. "A coat suitable for all occasions requires more careful selection than any other kind," she went on. "For this type one should avoid either strictly tailored or dressy styles and should choose, instead, a conservative blend of these types."

Warmth, comfort, service and pleasing appearance are what a woman looks for when she selects a cloth coat, believes Miss Scott, who further emphasized that "materials, designs and workmanship affect these qualities to a great extent." She said every woman who buys a coat or a dress this fall should keep these points in mind:

1. Avoid extreme styles. These are generally fads and will definitely date the coat. A "good-buy garment" will serve you long after the fad has passed.

2. Remember a coat is intended, above all, to keep you warm. Look for both design and material that will keep out cold. A neck line that fastens up about the throat, sleeves that are close about the wrists, and a wide front lap that does not flap open, are features that make for warmth.

3. Choose a style that can be brushed clean and pressed neatly.

4. Find out what percentage of the fabric is wool and what the other fibers are, as well as their quality.

5. Be sure that the fabric is fast in color to sun, light, dry-cleaning and rain.

6. Take time to examine lining and inquire about interlining, so you will know what qualities of material have been used in both.

7. See that all parts are cut with the grain of the goods.

8. If the coat is fur-trimmed, look for tag stating the kind of fur and facts about its wearing qualities. On an all-occasion coat beaver might be your best buy; probably raccoon on a sturdy sports coat; and squirrel for dress use.

9. Notice whether coat has serviceable fastenings.

10. Look for smooth buttons of good quality, simple design and fast color.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

New Hand Lotion Also Makes Excellent Body Tonic.

By Mignon.

THERE is a new "hand tonic," or so it is called, that is softening and, it seems to me, whitening for the hands. It is also one of the very finest lotions for a body rub that I have yet discovered. It comes in one of those new, very advantageous bottles with a small opening at the top, so that you have to shake the bottle a bit to get the lotion. The trouble with these wide-mouthed bottles is that when you want a little lotion you get a deluge—unless it's one of those slow pouring concoctions that you can manage.

It is very infrequently that you find a hand and body lotion in one, with a rich content, just the right consistency, apparently without perfume. This one has a pleasant scent which would indicate that it does have some slight touch of a fragrance in it.

A friend who was in a hospital for a rest cure had her nurse give her a light rub with this lotion after her morning bath and she said never had her skin been so smooth and white and soft as after the use of it. After all, there isn't any woman living who wants to have a fish-scale surface. Women are made up not of "sugar and spice and all things nice," as in times gone by, but of pride, mostly. It is the feeling that you are not a hard-shelled, unlovely creature that gives you the zip you need to encounter the world feeling you are quite as lovely as the next woman. It's what you feel, not what other people see, think and say, that makes you equal to the tasks ahead of you. Try this lotion. I know you will love it.

Women Outnumber Men in the Cities

Survey Shows 6 Out of 10 Over 15 Married.

The outlook for spinsters is not bright in the "typical American city." A survey of such cities made by Prof. William F. Ogburn, of the University of Chicago, shows their population to consist of only 97 men to every 100 women.

In an article in Public Management, Prof. Ogburn tells of the results of his study, which was made in 23 cities with populations of between 25,000 and 100,000. The study showed that in such cities, six out of every ten persons more than 15 years old were married and that the average family consisted of three or four persons, including boarders and relatives.

The average renting family paid $28 a month and the average per capita tax was $32 a year.

FHA Figures Show Construction Gain

Commitments to insure new home construction issued by the Federal Housing Administration from January 1, 1936, up to and including June 30, totaled $61,878,642, Administrator Stewart McDonald has announced. This was nearly four times the volume of the comparable period in 1935.

Substantially all large-scale housing mortgages accepted for insurance by the Housing Administration also are for new construction, but are not included in these figures. On June 30 they totaled $51,111,200, while on January 1 they totaled only $19,972,158.

During the past month, when total business of the banks and other private financial institutions lending insurable private funds under terms of the national housing act reached a new monthly record, the gain in new construction mortgages over June 1935 reached slightly more than 271 per cent. May's gains over the same month last year was 175 per cent.

Patrick Henry Shrine Declared Unlikely

Richmond, Aug. 19 (AP).—Red Hill, the Charlotte County estate where Patrick Henry spent his last years and where he is burried, is not likely to become a national monument under present conditions, State officials have been informed by the National Park Service.

Chairman Wilbur C. Hall, of the conservation and development commission, made public today a letter from Herbert Evison, regional officer, in which the park service officer pointed out that such a monument had ben authorized by the Seventy-fourth Congress, but no appropriation had ben made for acquisition of the property.

Steamer Saves Seaman Swimming in Ocean

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Aug. 19 (AP).—Charles Donato, seaman aboard the S. S. Vacuum, was on his way to Beaumont, Tex., today after having been picked up swimming at sea by the S. S. Chester Sun.

Terse radio messages from the two ships to the Coast Guard base here told the story of Donato's disappearance and rescue.

The Chester Sun advised Coast Guardsmen it found Donato last midnight 60 miles southeast of Miami, exhausted but unhurt. The Vacuum reported the seaman was not discovered missing until this morning because he had been off duty two days on account of illness. "No doubt but he jumped overboard," the Vacuum added in its radio message.

G-Men Enter White Slave Drive in City

Latter Goes Sleepless to Press Campaign After Hoover Plea.

Continuing a drive to rid the District of white slave traffickers, Detective Roy E. Blick, of the vice squad, seized two men and two women yesterday and charged them with volating the Mann act.

Blick, with Detective William G. Fawcett and Department of Justice agents, arrested Roy J. Torville, 32, of Lebanon, Ohio, and Alberta B. Brown, 28, of Orlando, Fla., in the downtown district shortly after midnight yesterday. The man was charged with violating and conspiracy to violate the white slave law, while the woman was booked on the latter charge.

Working without sleep, Blick continued the drive, and in the afternoon rounded up another man and woman said by him to operate another ring.

At headquarters they gave their names as Charles R. Spielman, 21, and Helen M. Smith, 27, both of Hagerstown, Md. They were charged with violating the Mann act in the same manner as the first couple.

According to Blick, Torville and the Brown woman were conspiring to import girls here from Orlando, Fla., for immoral purposes. The man was arrested on the street after he is alleged to have been seen accepting money from a young girl.

Both were ordered locked up overnight. They probably will be arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage today.

The other couple—Spielman and the Smith woman—were arrested in a downtown hotel room. Blick said his investigation here coupled with information of the Justice agents from Hagerstown led to the arrest.

The suspects are accused of enticing young girls here on promise of large and easy earnings from immorality. Most of the girls still are in their teens, Blick said.

The arrests follow two weeks of continuous effort to break up several large rings operating here from Southern cities, police said.

Oscar W. Seay, 31, of Emporia, Va., was held for the grand jury under $10,000 bond last week when he was arraigned before Commissioner Turnage on a white slave charge.

Two women, Gene McWilliam, 28, of Lansing, Mich., and Charlotte M. Sprouse, 20, of Charlottesville, Va., alleged puppets of Seay, were held as Government witnesses under $2,000 bail each.

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, announced last week his agents, in co-operation with local police are prepared for a determined drive to stamp out wholesale transportation of women for immoral purposes that is prevalent here.

Vaudeville Planned For Final Cruise

Vaudeville acts and carnival features will be offered as part of the entertainment during the final Gold Cup cruise of the summer which will be held at 8:30 p. m., August 27, on the steamer Potomac.

The program is in charge of the sponsors' committee of the President's Cup Regatta Association, of which Harold Allen Long is chairman. Adam Arnold, president of the Lions Club, will be in charge of all carnival amusements.

A dance orchestra will play during the cruise. Tickets for the event are on sale at Woodward & Lothrop, the Willard, the American Automobile Association, the Keystone Automobile Club and other downtown agencies.

The regatta will be held September 24-27. Entries for the Gold Cup race already outnumber those of any previous year.

Mrs. Virginia C. Stehl Rites Will Be Tomorrow

Last rites for Mrs. Virginia Coulter Stehl, widow of Edward Stehl, who died yesterday at her residence, Woodley Apartments, Columbia road and Mintwood place northwest, will be held tomorrow at 11 a. m. in the Lincoln Chapel of the New York Avenue Pesbyterian Church. Burial services will follow at 1:30 p. m. in Greenmount Cemetery Chapel, Baltimore.

Mrs. Stehl is survived by two sons, Henry C. Stehl and Edward Stehl, jr., both of this city.

Such Truck!

Trailer Bearing New Cars Finally Claimed.

The owner of a trailer loaded with new cars, which had been abandoned for two days in the 1200 block Jefferson street northwest, turned up at the Seventh Precinct yesterday and claimed his belongings.

He identified himself as the manager of the Ford Motor Co. branch in Alexandria, Va., and said he learned of the location of the missing trailer when a woman called his office and threatened to notify the police if he didn't take it from in front of her house.

He said the driver of the trailer was missing. Private J. B. Belt, Seventh Precinct, who was reporting his suspicions about the trailer when the manager appeared to claim it, said he thought one of the new cars was missing. The manager, however, refused to report the car stolen and did not ask the police to look for the driver.

2 Cities' Police Trace Weapons In Henry Case

Disclosures End of Week Pledged by Thompson; Arms Firm Reports.

Police in two cities are on the trail of the three guns found in a secret compartment of the car used in the killing of "Milsie" Henry and a complete report of their findings by the end of the week was promised by Detective Chief Bernard W. Thompson.

Thompson was very secretive about a confidential memorandum he received during the day from the Remington Arms Co., makers of the shotgun. The shotgun has been definitely established as the one which killed Henry, according to Lieut. John H. Fowler, police ballistics expert.

Thompson said that the shotgun had been traced to a city which he refused to name. He added that he was in touch with the police in that city and they were checking on its sale.

The other guns, .38 and .45 Smith & Wesson revolvers, though not used in the murder of Henry April 21, 1932, may provide valuable evidence. They were discovered hidden in a secret compartment in the murderer's car along with the shotgun. A mechanic, searching for a short circuit in the car more than four years after the crime, made the discovery by accident.

The revolvers have been traced to St. Louis, Mo. Thompson said he has written police there in an effort to identify their purchaser.

Charles Harris, Washington gangster now serving a life sentence in the Federal penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa., for the slaying of Henry, is planning to seek reopening of his case.

Mrs. Killeen Ticket Swept Into Office

The ticket of Mrs. Mary Killeen, first Gold Star Mother to be elected to the presidency of the American Legion Auxiliary, District of Columbia Department, was swept into office with its leader at elections Monday night, with the exception of two delegates to the national convention.

Those elected with Mrs. Killeen at the final meeting of the auxiliary's annual convention, which was closed early yesterday after a long night session, were:

Irene Sheehan, Mrs. Ruth Turner and Lou Warren, vice presidents; Mrs. Ada Carver, historian; Mrs. Evelyn Copeland, chaplain; Mrs. Blanche Cory, sergeant at arms; Mrs. Sarah Jones and Mrs. Emma Warren, color bearers, and Mrs. Harriet Epps, property custodian.

Six delegates were chosen to attend the national convention in Cleveland next month. They were Mrs. Killeen, Nicie Perrell, retiring president; Lillian Reagan, one of the defeated candidates for the presidency; Minnie Mae Hardie, Mrs. Sarah Jones and Mrs. E. Louise Warren.

Hazen Will Attend Anacostia Outing

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen has accepted an invitation to attend the Greater Anacostia Field Day on Thursday, August 27, Dr. George C. Havenner, chairman of the guest committee, announced yesterday.

Others who have been asked to attend the celebration include W. A. Van Duzer, director of traffic; J. B. Gordon, sanitary engineer; Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways; George W. Offutt, chairman of the ABC board; Isaac W. Gans, Agnes K. Mason, and Richmond B. Keech, associate members of the board; and Miss Sybil Baker, superintendent of playgrounds.

Dr. Havenner also announced that C. Marshall Finnan, of the office of National Capital Parks, has extended the full facilities of Anacostia Park for the event. The morning will be given over to athletic contests for children. An old-fashioned picnic will be held at noon. The afternoon program will feature a baby show and band concert.

A parade, starting at 7:30 p. m. at Thirteenth and S streets, in Anacostia, will close the celebration. Floats, decorated cars, several bands, and 20 or more horseman will be in the procession.

City Needs More Free Pools, Attendance Figures Indicate

Two of Playground Department's Swimming Spots Used by 1,200 a Day, Miss Baker Says; Southwest Urges Hoover Park Site.

By Ed. Fenton.

Attendance figures at Washington swimming pools show that the city's primary need is not only more pools but more free pools.

The Department of Playgrounds operates three pools on a no-charge basis. According to Miss Sibyl Baker, director of the Playground Department, two of these pools, at Georgetown and Rosedale playgrounds, are used by about 1,200 children a day during hot weather. The third pool, at Howard University, is used by a somewhat smaller number, she said.

However, the much larger pools under the National Capital Parks office, operated by the Welfare and Recreation Association, serve only 500 persons each on an average day. There is a charge for use of these pools, except for a two-hour period during the morning, when children are admitted free.

Capt. F. W. Hoover, head of the Welfare and Recreation Association, said last night that even on hot days the pools at Takoma and Eckington recreation centers seldom exceed an attendance of 1,600 persons. The pool at Banneker, he says, averages a warm weather attendance of only about 1,000, and the pool near Francis Junior High School hits a low with a maximum attendance figure of only 500. Many of those using these pools are, of course, adults.

Rates Are Lowered.

Capt. Hoover explained that rates had been lowered at the Francis Junior High School pool in an effort to attract more swimmers. He said that due to lack either of funds or interest in swimming, the number of attendants has not increased appreciably.

These figures served to bolster the demands of Southwest Washington citizens for a free pool in that section.

At the present time there are no supervised swimming pools of any kind in that section.

The forgotten children in that part of the city are forced to go down to the wharves and docks of Washington Channel when they want to swim.

This summer four of them have gone down there to die.

Monday C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks, announced he had asked contractors to submit estimates for foundation work for two pools, in Anacostia and East Potomac Park. His announcement followed articles in The Post.

Site Held Too Distant.

Southwest citizens, however, say that construction of a pool in East Potomac Park will be of no value to waterfront children. They point out that the East Potomac Park site, while technically in the Southwest, is nearly two miles distant from children who live in that section.

Moreover, Southwest citizens say children from their area cannot afford to patronize a pool that has any charge whatsoever.

If the East Potomac Park pool has a two-hour morning period free to children and if a ferry boat across Washington Channel is furnished to take the children to the pool, then, Southwest citizens say, that's better than nothing.

But what they would really like to have is a free pool in Hoover Playground.

Meanwhile, the forgotten children of Washington's waterfront will continue to go down to Washington Channel to die.

Medical R. O. T. C. Assigned to G. U.

Georgetown University announced yesterday that the War Department had approved its application for the re-establishment of a Medical R. O. T. C. unit for the 1936-37 academic year.

All medical units of the R. O. T. C. were suspended last year throughout the country. Congress, before it adjourned, authorized its re-establishment. It failed, however, to make definite appropriations so the medical units this year will be limited in number.

Maj. Gen. Albert J. Bowley, commanding general of the Third Corps Area, Baltimore, who notified Georgetown it was on the list of medical units said the officer in charge would be designated soon.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Washington Summer Concerts Association makes its fourteenth appearance at the Potomac Watergate, with Guy Fraser Harrison as guest conductor and Howard Mitchell, violoncellist, as soloist. Program: Overture to "Martha" (Flotow), Concerto in A minor for violoncello (Saint-Saens), Overture to "Tannhaeuser" (Wagner), "Roses from the South" (Johann Strauss the Younger), "Londonderry Air" and "Shepherds Hey" (Grainger), "Irish Rhapsody" (Herbert).

For a few moments last night it looked as though rain would interrupt the musical proceedings at the Watergate. Just as Mr. Harrison raised the baton to attack the first measures of the Strauss waltz, a light sprinkle began to fall, and a few apprehensive auditors started toward the exits. But the orchestra kept on its lilting way, the showerlet passed, and all was well.

The overture to "Martha" is one of the most deceptive pieces of music ever written; its thoughtful, almost elegiac opening section has the air of preparing one for a romantic tragedy, whereas it has no more serious purpose than to introduce a comedy of errors. Even when its mood quickens to vivacity, there is still a mild tinge of melancholy which may have its justification in the misunderstandings of the operatic plot, but is utterly at variance with the essential humor of the work.

Perhaps the overture reflects the Teutonic side of Flotow as contrasted with Gallic grace and elegance of the opera as a whole. For his training was Parisian and "Martha" is the expansion and elaboration of the one act that he contributed to a ballet, "Harriette, ou la Servante de Greenwiche," which was produced at the Grand Opera. Be that as it may, the admixture of national traits has had the odd result of making "Martha" one of the most popular operas in English-speaking countries.

Howard Mitchell well deserved the four recalls which he received after his eloquent reading of the Saint-Saens concerto. Despite an atmospheric humidity depressing for the most valiant of strings, he drew a firm, rounded tone and maintained precise intonation. There was ease in his handling of the technical difficulties with which Saint-Saens was not sparing, and he did full justice to the melodic beauties.

The concerto was the intellectual apex of the program, for it notably combines cerebral finesse with emotional urgency. After this work, the Strauss waltz seemed an ebullition of rhythm and the "Tannhaeuser" overture a surging sea of passion.

Folk music had its innings in the concluding numbers: Percy Grainger's adroit arrangements of the haunting Irish tune from County Derry and the infectious English air, and the "Irish Rhapsody" in which Victor Herbert perpetually reminds us that he was born in Dublin.

Mr. Harrison had a commanding manner and showed himself as a conductor alert to the niceties of phrase and dynamics. The orchestra was in good form and commendably spirited on a sultry night. There were a few minor falterings in the Wagnerian overture and some ragged spots in the prestissimo culmination of "Shepherds Hey," but the program as a whole went with a sturdy pace.

Sigma Sigma Sigma, educational sorority, which is holding its biennial national convention at the Wardman Park Hotel, will devote today's program to social activities and discussion groups. Feature of the evening will be the Founders' dinner at which members of Alpha Chapter will act as hostesses. The dinner will be followed by an entertainment program.

U. S. Worker Dies in Leap From Office

Body Hurtles 10 Floors to Sidewalk, Missing a Pedestrian.

Occupants in Room Fail in Efforts to Stop Death Plunge.

Possibly moved by a groundless fear that his application for admission into Soldiers Home would be denied, Warren S. Sample leaped yesterday from a tenth-floor window in the Government office building where he was employed as an auditor.

Still alive after striking the Eleventh street sidewalk near F street and missing a woman pedestrian by inches, Sample later was pronounced dead at Casualty Hospital. He was 66 and roomed at 128 C street northeast.

He was a cadet at the United States Military Academy in West Point in 1895. He spent several years in the Army before entering the Federal civil service in 1900. He had been a General Accounting Office auditor since 1921.

Shortly after noon yesterday Sample left the Soldiers Home Hospital, where he had been a patient since August 1, to see E. W. Bell, chief of the General Accounting Office audit division with offices on the tenth floor of the Moses building, 514 Eleventh street northwest.

Asked to Wait.

Bell was absent and Sample was asked to wait. He sat down in a chair facing an open window. The only others in the room were J. C. Nevitt, assistant chief, and Ernest Loving, an auditor. They were talking to each other at a desk at an opposite corner when Nevitt suddenly looked up to see Sample poised on the window ledge.

"I rushed over and succeeded in grabbing one arm, but I was too late," said Nevitt, who lives at 102 Spring street, Chevy Chase, Md. "He slipped from my grasp."

The assistant chief's wrist watch was torn off in the struggle.

Sample's hurtling body missed striking a woman pedestrian by no more than a foot, according to eyewitnesses.

He was still alive when a Casualty Hospital ambulance arrived, but was pronounced dead shortly after arrival. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a suicide certificate.

Health Fails.

Mrs. Elizabeth Rushforth, in whose home Sample roomed, said he had been in failing health for some time.

After a brief absence from work he returned to the office last month only to be compelled to enter Soldiers Home Hospital again after making application for retirement on grounds of disability.

Sample had no cause to fear he would be denied entry into the hospital, Col. John P. Wade, secretary-treasurer of the institution, declared last night.

The elderly auditor, while a hospital patient, was listed as a temporary admission, said Col. Wade, and was fully qualified for permanent residence in the home.

The victim was a native of Tennessee and a widower. The only immediate survivor known here is a sister, Mrs. Lannie Gatton, of Louisville, Ky.

Branch Libraries' Hours Announced

Opening and closing hours for public library branches were announced yesterday by Dr. George Bowerman, librarian. The five major branches, Georgetown, Mount Pleasant, Northeastern, Southeastern and Takoma Park will remain open daily except Saturday from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. in both adult and juvenile departments. On Saturdays they will be open from 9 a. m. to 1 p. m.

Five minor branches, Chevy Chase, Conduit road, Eastern High School, Tenley and Woodridge will remain closed until September 7. The children's room at the central library will be closed until September 12.

Adult departments of the central library will continue to observe their usual hours, except the Washingtoniana division which is closed until September 12, and the art department which will continue to close at 6 p. m. until that date.

Boy, 5, Injured by Auto, Is Treated at Hospital

Donald Rale, 5, of 226 C street northeast, was treated at Casualty Hospital yesterday for concussion of the brain and abrasions after being knocked down by an automobile while playing near his home.

The boy was taken to the hospital by Walter C. Numyer, 43, of 803 C street northeast, driver of the car that struck him. Donald was released from the hospital after treatment.

Non-Profit Sale Of Milk Gains Hazen Support

Committee Outlines Project for Corporation to Serve Public, Hospitals.

The Washington Consumers' Council yesterday sent a delegation to call upon Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen and to inform him of a plan to establish a nonprofit corporation to buy milk directly from dairymen and to sell it for 8 cents a quart to public and semi-public institutions.

Hazen expressed himself as sympathetic with the project and offered the services of the health and welfare departments and the corporation counsel's office.

The committee that called upon the commissioner was headed by Mrs. John Boyle, jr., chairman of the council, and included Mgr. John A. Ryan, Mrs. Huston Thompson and Matthew F. Boyd.

Under the proposed plan the milk distributing corporation would be operated by a board of directors chosen from each of the hospitals and child welfare agencies which would be served. Mrs. Boyle predicted that it will begin operation within six weeks.

The corporation probably would pay a flat price of 24 cents a gallon to producers for milk and would take bids from dairies on pasteurization, bottling and delivery. The council believes it thus can cut the retail price of milk to welfare agencies as much as 5 cents a quart.

Farmers now generally get 26 cents a gallon for class 1 milk, plus premiums for butter fat content, but cheaper prices are paid for other grades.

They are asking for an increase of 4 cents a gallon, which, if granted, would bring about a jump in the retail milk price from 13 to 14 cents a quart.

New Deal Unit Aims Blow at Merit Lodge

Amendment to Be Asked at Detroit Conclave of Federation.

An amendment to the constitution of the American Federation of Government Employes, barring all employes of the Civil Service Commission and all personnel, division and supervisory officials from holding national office in the federation, will be sought at the Detroit convention next month.

A resolution proposing such an amendment was passed at a recent meeting of the Tennessee Valley Authority Lodge 136, one of the New Deal lodges.

Should the amendment be adopted by the convention it would automatically disqualify the four Washington members of the national executive council—Cecil E. Custer, national treasurer; Ira Y. Bain, Michael D. Schaefer and G. Carroll Dimond, vice presidents, whose recall is being sought by six other New Deal lodges. James G. Yaden, chief of the examining division of the Civil Service Commission, also would be disqualified as president of the District department.

The amendment also would bar all supervisory officials, save those in minor positions, from being an officer or delegate of a local lodge, stripping a number of leaders of old-line lodges of their power. The conservative wing of federation is certain to fight the proposed amendment.

The text of the resolution indorsing the amendment, copies of which have been received at national headquarters, follows:

"No employe of the United States Civil Service Commission or in the personnel office or division of any Government agency shall be eligible to serve as a national officer of the A. F. G. E. while so employed, and no person holding an official or supervisory position in the United States Civil Service Commission or in the personnel office or division of any Government agency shall be eligible to serve as a national officer of the A. F. G. E. or as an officer or delegate of any local lodge or other subordinate jurisdiction, except that employes of said commission or employes in the personnel office or division of any Government agency holding minor supervisory positions may serve as officers and delegates of any local lodge composed entirely of employes of said commission or personnel office or division."

Board for Survey To Be Announced

Acting Budget Director Daniel W. Bell conferred with the President yesterday at Hyde Park about the naming of a committee of three to investigate fiscal relations between the District and the Federal government. At the close of the conference Bell said the names of the committee members would be announced tomorrow.

The budget director indicated the information would be telephoned from Hyde Park to Washington. He said he talked with President Roosevelt about selection of the committee and that he was awaiting the acceptance of only one more man before giving the President the complete list.

Two New Films Will Be Added To Local Fare

New Amusement Week to Be Marked by Revivals and Holdovers.

Tomorrow at Loew's Capitol Theater Washington will have its first opportunity to appraise the worth of Simone Simon, the young French ingenue, who recently has created something of a sensation on the West Coast. The vehicle of her screen debut will be the Twentieth Century-Fox production of "Girls' Dormitory," in which pivotal roles also will be played by Herbert Marshall and Ruth Chatterton, supported by Constance Collier, J. Edward Bromberg, Dixie Dunbar, John Qualen and others of note. The film is an adaptation of a European stage success, "Commencement," by Fodor. It concerns a young girl in a private school in Switzerland who falls in love with the head of the institution. On the stage, the bill will be headlined by Ben Blue, former Washingtonan and one of the most ludicrous comedians on stake or screen. Other acts will be presented by Sybil Bowan, the Five Maxellos, Roye and Maye and the Elida Dancers.

Bing Crosby, supported by Frances Farmer, Bob (Bazooka) Burns and the "queen of swing," Martha Raye, will be the star of the screen portion of the entertainment announced for the week beginning tomorrow at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater, in "Rhythm on the Range," in which the technique of the musical comedy is transferred to the open country. Crosby appears as a singing cowboy in this one. On the stage Phil Spitalny and his "Hour of Charm," all-girl orchestra, will supply the diversion. In addition to the finest organization of feminine instrumentalists in the American theater, Maestro Spitalny also presents such accomplished specialists as Maxine, vocal soloist with the deep barytone voice; the Three Little Words, vocal harmonists, already well known to Washington; Sylvia and her violin, a real virtuosa; Rachel and Lola, piano duo, and Marion Lawler, dancer. This bill ran three weeks at the New York Paramount.

As was to have been expected of so substantial a romantic drama, comprehensively covering a vital decade in the lives of a young married couple, "To Mary—With Love," costarring Warner Baxter and Myrna Loy, will continue a second week, beginning tomorow at Loew's Palace Theater. Ian Hunter, Claire Trevor and Jean Dixon head the supporting cast. The supplementary attractions also will be held over.

Katharine Hepburn, in the title role, and Fredric March, as the Earl of Bothwell, supported by Florence Eldredge, as Elizabeth, Moroni Olsen, Douglas Walton, Alan Mowbray, Ralph Forbes, Donald Crisp and a huge cast, will continuea third week at RKO-Keith's in RKO-Radio's picturization of Maxwell Anderson's drama of "Mary of Scotland." "The March of Time," added to the program last week, also will be carried over for the extended run.

"The Green Pastures," Warner Brothers' impressive film version of Marc Connelly's Biblical fable, with Rex Ingram in the role of De Lawd, will continue throughout this week and probably next as chief screen feature of the bill at the Metropolitan Theater. This unique production already has enjoyed a successful premiere week at the Earle.

Shirley Temple in "The Poor Little Rich Girl" will be the major attraction on the screen at Loew's Columbia Theater for the week beginning tomorrow, following her recent fortnight's run at the Palace. In this admirable combination of drama, music and dancing, the tiny star is supported by Michael Whalen, Claude Gillingwater, Jack Haley, Gloria Stuart, Alice Faye and Henry Armetta.

Following the current engagement of "Cavalcade" at the Little Theater, the bill, beginning Sunday, will be featured by a revival of the Ben Hecht-Charles MacArthur production of "The Scoundrel," in which the stellar role is played by Noel Coward, supported by Julie Haydon, Lionel Stander, Alexander Woollcott, Stanley Ridges and Martha Sleeper.

Dancing and swimming, two of the most healthful and beneficial of summer diversions, continue to flourish at Glen Echo Park as the season begins to wane. In addition to these pastimes, there are 50-odd other amusement devices at Glen Echo guaranteed to provide something for every known amusement taste.

The next attraction at the Roadside Theater, beginning next Monday night, August 24, and continuing for two weeks, will be another rare old melodrama bearing the sinister title of "Among the Moonshiners." This thrilling play of saloonkeepers and roustabouts, making it as tough as possible for the meek and virtuous, will be interpreted by the melo group of the duplex acting organization.

The Estelle Wentworth opera group in "Cavalleria Rusticana," and the F. B. I. acting group in "A Game of Chess," the prize-winning play in the last one-act play tournament, will supply the program for the eleventh summer festival program in the National Sylvan Theater next Tuesday night, August 25, at 8.

About the Showshops

"THE GORGEOUS HUSSY," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new screen romance of the National Capital in Andrew Jackson's day, with Joan Crawford cast as the titular character and Robert Taylor, Franchot Tone, Lionel Barrymore and others of distinction in the principal supporting roles, will be given its world premiere and international press preview in Loew's Palace Theater one week from tonight, Thursday, August 27, at 8:30 o'clock.

BELL.

This was definitely decided yesterday, following telephone conversations between Division Manager Carter Barron, of Loew's, Inc., and Howard Strickling, West Coast publicity director, and Oscar Doob, occupying the same position with M-G-M in New York. Several cities were in lively competition for the honor of presenting this notable picture for the first time in the world on any public screen. Washington finally won the coveted prize not alone because the action of the drama centers in the Capital City of an earlier day, but also because the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Loew executives were cognizant of the brilliant success that has marked other world premieres held under the same auspices.

The world premiere a week from tonight will be sponsored by the White House Correspondents Association, of which Fred Storm, of the United Press, is president. Motion picture critics from many distant cities in all parts of the country, as well as film executives high in the councils of the industry, will be present for the occasion, which, as goes without saying, will be celebrated with all of the colorful embellishments characteristic of a "Hollywood premiere" of the first order.

The current bill at the Palace featured by "To Mary—With Love," costarring Warner Baxter and Myrna Loy, with Ian Hunter, Claire Trevor and Jean Dixon in support, will be continued through to the hour of 6 p. m. next Thursday, when the doors will be closed until the single evening performance at 8:30 of "The Gorgeous Hussy." A limited number of seats will be made available to Washington theatergoers, over and above the considerable number of invited guests who will be present.

"The Gorgeous Hussy" is a picturization of Samuel Hopkins Adams' brilliant story of the amazing life of Peggy O'Neale, the tavernkeeper's daughter, who rose to incredible social and political heights during the Administration of Andrew Jackson and was said to be the power behind the Presidential chair during that era.

Joan Crawford, as has been said, appears in the title role, with Robert Taylor, the screen's meteoric young leading man, as her lover, Bow Timberlake, and Lionel Barrymore in the part of Andrew Jackson. In addition to Franchot Tone, the star's husband in priavte life, the cast is notable for the inclusion of James Stewart, another young leading man for whom great things are predicted; Alison Skipworth and Melvyn Douglas.

This will be a busy late summer for both public and press in the Capital. Hot on the heels, as the saying goes, of "The Gorgeous Hussy" will come the local premiere of "Romeo and Juliet" and, after that, "Anthony Adverse," "The Good Earth" and others of the season's big ones. The list of these is so long and so imposing that Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., has written, himself, a powerful piece about the unprecedented situation, a copy of which has just come to hand. We shall have something more to say about this catalogue of greatness at another time.

At the moment, the important thing seems to be—next to the "Gorgeous Hussy" business—that Norman Pyle, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's itinerant publicist de luxe, accompanied by John Worth, formerly of the Belasco staff, is in town to bend his energies exclusively to the establishment of "Romeo and Juliet" as a great piece of mass entertainment, rather than as a stodgy literary classic, between now and its opening at the National on the night of Sunday, September 6. That should not be so difficult, if the casual reader will just stop to consider that Romeo fell out love with one girl, in love with another, participated in a street brawl, was married and separated from his bride, with a few convenient murders on the side, all within the space of 24 hours.

In fact, "Romeo and Juliet," as originally conceived and written by Will Shakespeare, comprised a practically perfect motion picture scenario, bristling with precisely the type of action that may be said to have been made to order for the cameras. More of this later, also.

• • • •

This week's voting on the melodrama to be revived by the Roadside Theater was a little surprising to the executives of that acting group for the reason that it very evidently represented the choices of patrons who have seen only this season's productions. To nothing else can be attributed the sudden emergence of "Under the Gaslight," "Around the World in 80 Days" and "Arizona" as the week's predominant leaders in the balloting.

Even so, the last-minute spurt has not been sufficient to overtake last week's hardier leaders. While "Arizona" gained considerably, "Gaslight" and "Around the World" did not make the first flight. It still rests among "Arizona," "Murder in the Red Barn" and "The Drunkard." The next three days will tell the tale—and then we'll tell you.

• • • •

The muggy August air is full of rumors of "big news" that is about to break along Ninth street. Unless all present signs fail, it will come as a surprise to those not generally accustomed to place much faith in the "dark horse." Only one detail remains to be "set" to complete an important new commitment which may not be disclosed at this time without breaking a confidence.

• • • •

That Darby Farm summer theater project of Stephen E. Cochran's seems to have been kicked vigorously and fatally over the heart by the 4-to-1 vote of the Montgomery County Commissioners, refusing to rezone the property from "Residential A" to "Commercial D." The impression will prevail in many quarters that this action has delayed, if it has not completely destroyed, a development of prime importance and value to both Washington and Baltimore and one of inestimable helpfulness to a legitimate theater slowly struggling back to something of its former eminence as a factor in cultural development.

This, distinctly, is a step in exactly the wrong direction.

Culbertson on Bridge

A Bad Investment.

If a supposedly adult person were to invest in a venture that he himself believed had considerably less than an even chance for success, his relatives or friends probably would send in a hurry call for the nearest alienist. Yet precisely that sort of "investing" goes on interminably at the contract table, and while the partner of the mad gambler probably would like to take the aforesaid action, he is always dissuaded by the haunting fear that some one may do the same thing to him later.

In today's hand the declarer attempted a finesse that he almost could know would be doomed. It was, and thus he chucked a vulnerable game that could have been made with ease by two different lines of play.

West, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1 spade	3 diamonds
3 spades	4 dimds	Pass	5 diamonds
Pass	Pass	Pass

West was tempted to make a sacrifice bid of five spades, but was restrained by the thought that he might thus push the opponents into a lay-down slam, his extreme length in his partner's suit practically guaranteeing that there would be no defensive spade trick.

West opened the ace of spades and declarer ruffed. Two rounds of trumps were led and the declarer attempted to establish dummy's fourth club by leading the ace, king and three-spot. But East had four clubs and that plan failed to work. Declarer ruffed the club return from East and then tried the heart finesse. When East smothered dummy's queen, the "jig was up." There was no way of avoiding the loss of another heart trick and the contract was down one.

Elementary reasoning would have established the fact that the heart king must be off side. East had made a vulnerable spade bid, without the ace, and therefore could not have held anywhere near the minimum requirements unless he had held the heart king.

The simplest way of making contract would have been to ruff the opening lead, enter dummy with a trump, ruff away dummy's remaining spade, and then draw West's remaining trump. With dummy and his own hand cleared of spades, the ace, king and three of clubs should have been led. East would win and again exit with the fourth club, but declarer should merely toss on a heart. Then East would be "washed up;" he would have to lead a heart up to dummy's tenace, or a spade which would permit dummy to ruff while declarer discarded his losing heart.

Masters' Play Of Mormonism Given Premiere

'Moroni' Is Presented at Mohawk Festival With Author Present.

By the Associated Press.

Schenectady, N. Y., Aug. 19.—Edgar Lee Masters, who became a dramatist by way of experience as a Chicago lawyer, poet and biographer, came here Tuesday for the world premiere of his new epic drama, "Moroni," at the Mohawk Drama Festival's outdoor theater on the Union College campus.

"Moroni" is based on the recorded life of Joseph Smith, a Vermont farm boy whose vision of golden plates awaiting a translator on Cumorah Hill, near Palmyra, N. Y., led him to found the Mormon religion.

Masters, in an interview on the eve of what he admitted would be for him an exciting evening in the theater, said he was inspired to write "Moroni" because it was "an American theme—one of the greatest."

"It is to build up the American tradition and background, which not only needs to be done but must be adhered to" that he chose as his material the turbulent career of Joseph Smith and the birth of a religion indigenous to American soil, Masters said.

Based on Smith's Writings.

"Moroni" relates the finding of the golden plates, later translated into the Book of Mormon, as described by Smith in his own writings. The title is taken from the name of the angel who, Smith said, appeared to him in a vision and told him where the plates might be found.

The play follows Smith, descendant of American Revolutionary stock, who migrated to western New York as a boy, through the early days of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, which he founded; his pilgrimage to Ohio and Illinois at the head of a band of believers; his death and that of his brother Hyrum at the hands of a mob in Carthage, Ill., and the subsequent establishment of the church under the leadership of Brigham Young in the valley of the Great Salt Lake, Utah.

Donna Earl, cast as Emma, Joseph Smith's first wife, is the only person of the Mormon faith in the production. Other leading roles are played by Donald Arbury, as Joseph Smith; Curtis Cooksey, as Brigham Young, and Kay Strozzi as Sylvia, Joseph Smith's second great love.

Author Makes Speech.

Choral interludes by offstage singers have an important part in the production, which is acted on a stylized "space stage" created by Michael Weightman-Smith. It allows the actors at all times to stand out under lights in bold relief.

Cries of "author, author" brought Masters to the stage for a brief speech after the final curtain.

"I don't know what the author of a play can say after he has written it; perhaps he should say nothing," the poet, biographer and erstwhile Chicago lawyer asserted. He paid tribute to the "beauty of the production" under the direction of Charles Coburn, and to the "fine interpretation" given by the cast.

"Moroni" is underlined by warm humor and occasional flashes of satire.

Smith is depicted alternately as an imaginative leader of men, strong in the assurance of his vision, canny in mundane affairs; and as a misunderstood dreamer, assailed by doubts, torn between his spiritual ambitions and his ability to win wholly his second love, Sylvia Law.

To Be Seen Here in World Premiere

"The Gorgeous Hussy," latest starring vehicle for Joan Crawford, in which she is supported by that fabulous young "matinee idol," Robert Taylor, Lionel Barrymore and a distinguished cast, will be given its first presentation on any public screen a week from tonight. This world premiere will be celebrated at Loew's Palace Theater, following the conclusion of the run of the current screen feature, "To Mary—With Love." Pictured above is one of the film's early romantic scenes between Mr. Taylor, as Bow Timberlake, and Miss Crawford, as Peggy O'Neale, the tavern keeper's daughter who scaled the heights.

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE.

A Second Departure.

"You're going now, Robin?"

"As soon as I can throw some things in a bag. Call a taxi for me, Eden, like an angel?"

Eden sat on the bed while Robin folded things and put them between layers of tissue in a dressing case.

"Why are you taking so many clothes, Bobs? Surely you won't need half those for a week-end?"

"I hate looking poverty-stricken away from home. And somebody might set this building on fire and I'd be utterly impoverished and denuded. And you know how much frantic pleading it takes to get a couple of pairs of satin pajamas out of mother, even though she gets them for practically nothing. We had a scene yesterday over these—and as for this blouse—my dear, you would have thought I was asking for ermine!"

"You're so careless with your things, Bobs. I found your best tweed skirt here on the floor in a messy tumble."

"I was born to be served, Ede," Robin was unperturbed, "I was meant for wealth—to be precious to somebody who could pay and pay. Look at my hands—look at my feet——"

"And look at your silly conceit! You are pretty, Robin, but it's a responsibility, remember. You get your hands and feet from Gran. She could have been a famous beauty—but she let love wreck her career."

"Nice of her," Robin said, "otherwise, where would we have been? Don't get solemn and reproachful, darling—I've no intention of letting anything wreck my career—not even love. That must be my taxi buzzing at the door. Good-by, angel—you're too holy good for all of us. You should be preserved in wax under glass. Give my love to all the interesting gentlemen who killed Grappi."

She flew out, twitching on her coat, her bag bumping her knees. Nice, Eden thought, to be so carefree, so impervious to any duty or responsibility. Bridget would be displeased by this week-end exposition, very likely. But with Coburn's affair to distract her, she might be less concerned with Robin's headstrong activities.

Gran Arrives.

It was well past 3 when Gran let herself in. She looked jaded and wan. She took off her hat and folded her gloves carefully, and her lips worked a little before she spoke. Eden waited quietly.

Gran said, "I waited. I had the money—all of it. I went to the gate under the clock—I went to all the gates. I waited till 1—and then until 2, and half past—but Coburn did not come."

"You're sure you went to the right places, Gran?"

"You said La Salle street. I watched all the doors and all the gates. He didn't come."

Uneasy fears ran like ice crystals in Eden's blood. Something had gone wrong. Coburn was gone. The empty bedroom meant that he did not mean to return—but without money how could he go—and where?

She said, "We'll have to wait. There's nothing we can do."

Gran drank a cup of tea, ate a bran muffin. She was very tired.

"She's old," Eden found himself thinking suddenly. "We've taken her for granted so long. We've let her wear herself out serving us. We forgot that she was old."

"You should lie down and rest, Gran," he urged. "There's nothing at all we can do and waiting is such a strain."

"I couldn't rest," Gran protested. Then the door bell rang. Eden opened the door eagerly.

But it was not Coburn. It was Jack Garnett.

And with him was Gracie Lincoln.

Eden gasped a little, said, "Come in," shut the door hastily behind them. Then she asked sharply, "Clint?"

"He's alive," Garnett said, "but he hasn't become conscious yet."

"Sit down—you look worn out." Eden pulled out a chair for Gracie. "She's exhausted," Garnett said, as Gracie sank down into the chair, her face chalk white, her hands twisted tight together in a pathetic knot. "She wouldn't eat any lunch——"

"I couldn't." Gracie's voice was a whisper.

"You need a good cup of coffee," declared Gran, briskly. "Take off her coat, Edie. And you look as though you could use a meal, too, my lad."

"Thank you, Mrs. Faraday, but I've got to run. I have to see Martin Burke right away. You see, I sneaked Gracie out of that hospital. I shouldn't have done it, probably, but the detectives Field sent over were going to turn her over to a police matron to be locked up and I couldn't stand that—Gracie's had about enough for one day without being shoved around down at that station. They let Clint's mother go to a rooming house, but they wouldn't let Gracie go, so I kidnaped her. A nurse I know unlocked the window of a rest room and Gracie crawled out on the fire escape. I pulled her down on the ground floor, sneaked her through the boiler room and rolled her out of the building in a wheel chair covered with a blanket. I hope they find their wheel chair where I left it—and I hope I get my hat back."

Home No Haven.

"You'll admit it wasn't much of a hat," Eden smiled thinly.

"Not much—but the only. I left it on an ash can. Probably they'll decide that's where it belongs. Now I have to go and square myself with Burke. Could you take care of Gracie for a little while?"

"I can go home," declared Gracie, patiently.

"Not a chance. You know who will be watching that house—the same rats who got Clint. They don't know that Clint hasn't talked—they'd be after you and you wouldn't be safe. But here you'll be all right. Field has old Charlie Bates watching the place."

"We'll take care of her." Gran was cheerfully hospitable.

Eden was not so sanguine. Her mother would be returning soon and Bridget Faraday was not going to be pleased at finding this pale, hunted girl in her apartment. But perhaps Gran could handle the situation. Certainly Gran had every indication of being entirely adequate.

"You'll be back soon?" Eden asked Garnett.

But Gracie said, heavily, "Nothing's going to be all right for me, Jack—ever again."

"Catsfoot!" Gran protested. "A cup of hot tea and a little rest and things will look a lot brighter. And don't you go away, Jack Garnett, till I feed you up. You haven't eaten a decent meal today—I can tell by the stringy look on you."

"I had a hamburger," he grinned, his swift, engaging boyish grin.

"And a fine meal that was! Garbage, probably, with some onions and mustard on it. Come along out here, the both of you."

"Please drink this hot milk at least. You'll collapse just when Clint gets better and needs you."

Gran was spooning hot scrambled eggs onto Garnett's plate.

"The Irish," she said, "have a saying—never go down the lane to meet trouble. It comes on the highway on horseback. Now, take some more. You look better already."

"She'll be all rght," Garnett was confident. "She has more courage than anybody I know. And Clint's going to get well, Gracie. I'm going to Burke now——"

Cliff Spencer Bows, 1 Up, In Finals

Betschler's Putter Gives Him Second P.G.A. Links Crown.

Rivals Even After 29th Hole; Beaver Dam Pro in Ragged Form.

By Dave Herman.
A Staff Correspondent.

Rolling Road Course, Catonsville, Md., Aug. 19.—Charlie Betschler, Hillendale Country Club professional, who takes ten wiggles before he plays a shot, and spends 3 minutes lining up his putts, defeated Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam Country Club pro, 1 up in the 36-hole finals of the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. golf championship today.

It was Betschler's second Middle Atlantic crown. Two years ago he decisioned Al Houghton, former district pro, in the finals at Hillendale, and his mastery of Washington golfers continued today.

Spencer's downfall was a terrific surprise, and a big disappointment to the Washingtonian, who was a 7-to-5 favorite before tee time this morning.

But the tall-black-haired Beaver Dam tutor had only himself to blame for the defeat. He made plenty of mistakes on important holes, and failed to capitalize on his opportunities—and there were plenty of 'em.

Not Spectacular.

It didn't take any spectacular golf on Betschler's part to win. The stubby Hillendale pro shot a 75 in the morning to find himself 2 down to Spencer and in the afternoon he scored a 73 to negotiate the 36 holes in eight over par. Spencer, for that matter, wasn't particularly hot. Considering pickups on the fifth and eighth in the morning, the District golfer scored an approximate 74 and 76 for the two rounds.

Spencer's putting, which held him in pretty good stead during the first 18 holes, went sour in the afternoon. He three-putted several greens, and putted short on at least five others. Betschler missed only one short putt. Otherwise he swung that 25-year-old rusty putter as if it were a magic wand, but lost the twenty-fourth to a 5, after hitting his second out of bounds.

Even at Twenty-seventh.

He went 1 up for the first time at the twenty-eighth with a par 3 when Spencer two-putted from 12 feet and finally stymied himself. But Spencer squared the match by winning the twenty-ninth with a par 5, and they halved the next four holes until Betschler captured the thirty-fourth to go 1 up.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

That which was to be proved in his fight with Jack Sharkey—namely, could Joe Louis take a hard punch and remain upright?—still remains very much unproved, despite the thoroughness and dispatch with which the brown boy disposed of the talkative Bostonian.

POVICH.

What Joe Louis did prove all over again to the satisfaction of a fight public that knew it all the time was that he is a numbing puncher, quite the hardest hitter in heavyweight ranks since Jack Dempsey. But the burning question of Louis' ability to take it, raised by the right hands that Max Schmeling laid upon his chin, still remains very much unanswered.

With the excellent co-operation of Sharkey, who either wouldn't or couldn't stand up and fight, Louis was able to set a new record for himself in disposing of his third former champion. He required six rounds to beat Carnera into insensibility; he stepped up his punch production to knock Max Baer out in four, and the other evening he required only three rounds to beat Sharkey.

But there is no record that Sharkey flung more than one right hand at Louis, and that one missed. The weapon with which Max Schmeling had exposed Louis' vulnerability to the world was not in Sharkey's repertoire. If it was, Sharkey was too timid to use it.

Thus, until Louis meets another opponent of the Schmeling ilk who has the courage to cooly survey the brown boy and then let fly with a right hand, his greatness will still be very much in doubt. The unforgettable consistency with which Schmeling reached Louis' chin with a right-hand punch is a deterrent factor in any attempt to rank Louis with the really greats of the ring.

The rugged figure of Schmeling still stands squarely athwart the path of Louis' title hopes. There is the possibility, of course, that Champion Jimmy Braddock will remove the German from contention, but, until that is a fact, Louis faces the task of beating a man who made a sucker out of him for 12 rounds and then knocked him out.

With the Sharkey bout now history, Schmeling remains as the only ranking opponent of the Negro's who was willing to stand up and fight him. And the fact that the only man who stood up and fought Louis was the only man to beat him reflects no great credit upon Louis, aside from his apparent ability to instill seven kinds of fear into the run-of-the-mine fighters.

But Louis' next important battle will find him cast against either Schmeling or Braddock and that bout should forever answer the question of the Negro's ability to take it. If his opponent is Schmeling, then the question will certainly be asked and answered all over again. And if it is Braddock, well, nobody ever accused the champion of being faint-hearted or reluctant about throwing a punch.

If there are any lingering doubts as to the identity of the 1936 American League pennant winners, then perhaps we'd better take a look at the league's vital statistics.

The Yankees at this writing boast a lead of 12½ games over the second-place Cleveland Indians, with 39 games remaining to be played by the New Yorkers. The Cleveland club faces 37 more games. All of which means that if the Yankees win only 20 of those 39 games, or operate at a slightly better than a .500 average for the rest of the season, the Indians would have to win 31 games while losing only 6 to even tie for the pennant.

And if there are any among us who still think the Nats have a chance to win the pennant, listen to these figures:

If the Yankees win 20 of their remaining 39 games, then the Nats in order to finish ahead of the New Yorkers would have to win only 37 of their remaining 38 games. Under those circumstances, this department concedes the Nats to be out of the pennant race.

Owens Sails for U. S., Clinching Suspension

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

1. See his wife in Columbus, Ohio.
2. Consider offers to become a professional athlete.

"I don't know what I'm going to do when I reach the United States," the Ohio State star said shortly after we left Southampton, England, "except that I'm going straight to Columbus to see my wife and baby."

Accompanying Jesse was his college coach, Larry Snyder.

Officers of the Amateur Athletic Union had announced in Berlin Sunday that if Owens sailed he automatically would suspend himself.

The A. A. U. had scheduled Owens to appear in a track meet opening today in Stockholm, Sweden. Jesse said he had not contracted to enter the meet and he chose to go home immediately to investigate offers running up to $40,000 for ten weeks.

"Right now," Jesse said, "I intend to return to Ohio State next month for my senior year. But that depends upon my professional offers. If I do go back to college, I'll still be able to run and jump in intercollegiate competition because I understand the Big Ten has said that I still will be eligible regardless of my difficulties with the A. A. U."

Owens appeared cheerful as he stood by the rail and watched this boat sail at 12:40 p. m. (7:40 a. m. European daylight time). It was the first time he appeared happy since his arrival in England last week.

He was immaculate in a dark gray pencil-striped flannel suit and grinned broadly as he told a new story about the bulk of this ship.

"We got into a taxicab at Central Station and started here," He said. "The driver asked: 'which end of the boat do you want to go to? You know, it costs more for me to take you all the way to the stern than it does the bow.'"

Louis' Victory Hailed As One for Schmeling

Berlin, Aug. 19 (AP).—Berlin newspapers today hailed Joe Louis' knockout of Jack Sharkey as another "victory for Schmeling," viewing it as proof the Brown Bomber was in top form when Schmeling knocked him out two months ago.

No Opponent For Louis In Sight

Negro Is Flooded With Offers From Over Country.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 19.—The fight front was no man's land for the brown bombing Joe Louis today.

Max Schmeling flatly refused to consider a return bout with Louis and, the way things are shaping up, it will be a long time before Champion Jimmy Braddock will be in a ring with Schmeling, Louis or anybody else.

Month's Postponement.

Dr. Albee said he would recommend at least a month's postponement. However, the commission will make a decision on his recommendation at its meeting on Friday.

The specialist asserted the titleholder is suffering from sub-acute arthritis in the injured hands and both elbows. The growth in the left hand "has been there for several years," he said, adding, "it is my belief that the pain Braddock has been experiencing for several weeks was caused by the close proximity to the growth."

Meanwhile Louis' managers and friends began pulling all available wires to get Schmeling back into the ring with the Brown Bomber. They regard Louis a sure bet to avenge his June defeat by Schmeling and get set to tackle Braddock next summer.

To all of which Schmeling replied, "nothing doing," in his best English.

"I am here to fight Braddock for the title," he said. "That's all I'm interested in. There is no point in meeting Louis again except for the money and I don't need that.

"If the Braddock fight is postponed, I'll go back home and return when he is ready."

Numerous Offers.

Promoters Mike Jacobs was flooded with offers for the bomber's services. Lew Tendler sought to book Joe against Al Ettore in Philadelphia September 14, and Elwood Rigsby, Pittsburgh promoter, wants Joe to go against Al Gainer or some other contender in the smoky city the first week in October.

Joseph Triner, chairman of the Illinois State Athletic Commission, telegraphed Jacobs urging that a return Louis-Schmeling match be made for Chicago, pointing out there are 500,000 Germans in Chicago and another 500,000 in the area between Chicago and Milwaukee.

Jacobs said he might accept some of the offers just to keep Louis busy.

The fight experts were divided on the extent of Louis' improvement since the Schmeling fight, but Schmeling left no doubt as to how he stands.

"Joe was in worse shape for this

Paroled Convict Released to Take Job With Champ

By the Associated Press.

Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Aug. 19.—John McGrath, recently paroled former convict with "a hundred-dollar loan from Jimmy Braddock in my pocket," left here today for a New York meeting with the heavyweight champion, who has promised him a job.

McGrath was released from Anamosa Reformatory after he received a $100 check from Braddock to pay carfare East. The fighter was instrumental in obtaining McGrath's parole after McGrath had served two years of a ten-year breaking and entering sentence.

"I only asked Jimmy for $22.50—enough for bus fare, but he sent me a century," McGrath said. I knew him when he was a kid and that's why he helped me out. He's tops."

Red Sox Sink Further; A's Take Two

Hayes' Homer Wins First in 13th, 5-4; Kelley Wins Nightcap, 7-2.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Aug. 19.—Lee Ross and Harry Kelley pitched the Athletics to a double victory over the Boston Red Sox here today, Ross winning the first game, 5 to 4, in 13 innings, while Kelley got his victory in the regulation distance by a 7-to-2 score.

In the seventh, with the score tied at one-all, Billy Werber hit a homer with two mates on base, but the Athletics came back to drive Wilson from the mound and tie the score in the next inning, thanks to a homer by Bob Johnson.

Louis Saves a Car But Loses a Drink On Sharkey Trick

By the United Press.

New York., Aug. 19.—Jack Sharkey won a mental victory today over Joe Louis

The two fighters met at Twentieth Century Club headquarters to pick up their checks.

"How'ya Joe?" said Sharkey, pumping Joe's hand.

They chatted for a few minutes, then Jack laid three pennies on the desk before Louis. Jack asked, "how many pennies there, Joe?"

"Ah sees three pennies."

"I say there are four pennies there—and if I'm wrong will you buy me a car?" said Sharkey.

"Ah—No! Ah won't buy no car."

"Will you buy me a drink if I'm wrong?"

Joe bent over and counted the pennies again. "Shuah—I'll buy you a drink."

Then Sharkey burst out, "well, you certainly owe me a drink, because there's only three pennies there. I'm wrong."

Helen Jacobs Pressed, But Triumphs

Manchester-by-the-Sea, Mass., Aug. 19 (U.P.)—Two seeded stars were eliminated—one by default—in third-round singles play in the annual Essex County Club invitation tennis tournament today as other top-ranking women players were extended to win in singles and doubles.

Kay Winthrop, of Boston, provided the day's biggest upset by eliminating Dorothy Bundy, of Santa Monica, seeded No. 7, 6—4, 4—6, 6—4, while Theodosia Smith, Pasadena, Calif., advanced when fourth-seeded Carolin Babcock, of Los Angeles, defaulted.

Top-ranking Helen Jacobs was hard-pressed by Norma Taubelle, of New York, but won, 9—7, 6—4, and second-seeded Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Brookline, dropped a set before conquering Mrs. Virginia Rice Johnson, also of Brookline, 6—4, 2—6, 6—4.

Play in the doubles was marked by the first appearance of Kay Stammers, pretty English titlist. Paired with Alice Marble, of Pasadena, she defeated Mrs. Elizabeth Corbiere, of Southboro, and Mrs. William Endicott, of Boston, 6—4, 6—4, in a second-round match, then hurdled the third round with a 6—0, 6—4 win over the tandem of Mrs. Marjorie Morrill Painter, of Dedham, and Mrs. Mary Greef Harris, of Kansas City, Mo.

N. Y. Pounds DeShong to Triumph

Ruffing Records 15th Win, Allows 8 Hits to Take Decision.

DiMaggio and Stone Hit Home Runs; 10,000 Watch Game.

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

The Nats' five-game winning streak is no more. It perished yesterday by their own hand—the pitching hand of Jimmy DeShong, whose display of suicidal hurling took the form of 12 hits served up to the Yankees at moments best calculated to insure Washington's defeat.

With 6,000 ladies' day guests among the 10,000 customers shrieking their joy at the pop-ups of the Yanks and the Nats alike, Washington was almost thoroughly subdued by the pitching of Charley Ruffing, who recorded his fifteenth victory of the year when the Yanks won the ball game by a score of 7 to 4.

It was a ball game for six innings. But in the seventh it lost all semblance of a contest when the Yanks pummeled DeShong for five hits and came up with four runs that inflated what had ben a 3-to-2 lead to 7 to 2.

Ruffing, apparently smarting under two recent defeats by the Nats, permited 'em few liberties yesterday. He held 'em to eight hits and for five successive innings turned Washington back scoreless.

Didn't Dally.

DeShong didn't dally in inviting the Yanks to come ahead and take the ball game. He walked Crosetti the first man to face him, and then saw him score on singles by DiMaggio and Dickey. DeShong was consistently persistent, too, in the second when he walked Powell and pitched a double to Lazzeri that gave the Yanks a 2-0 lead.

Without warning the Nats tied the score in the second inning. Reynolds walked with one out, Kress shot a single through the post Crosetti had just vacated to cover second on a hit-run play, Bluege pushed a single to right, Bolton grounded into a force play and the Nats had their two runs.

Thus the game wore into the fifth, when with two out, DeShong laid an inviting pitch waist high to Joe DiMaggio who bumped it into the left-field bleachers for a home run that put the Yanks in front, 3-2.

That sock loomed like the decisive blow of the ball game as the Nats lapsed into futility against Ruffing, but it became only a minor incident in the scheme of things before the seventh inning was over.

That was when DeShong was pitching in the same motion. After getting one man out, he pitched consecutive singles to Rolfe, DiMaggio and Gehrig, and with two out he pitched a double to Selkirk and a single to Powell. At that point the Yanks had four more runs and Washington had a new pitcher, Buck Newsom, who hurled only three balls when Bolton brought the inning to a close by picking Powell off first base.

With their five-run deficit staring 'em down, the Nats were helpless even though Johnny Stone did bang an inside-the-park home run to the center-field fence in the eighth and a run was scored by Bluege in the ninth after he had succeeded in getting himself hit by a pitched ball.

U. S. Amateur Wrongly Named?

By Jack Cuddy.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

New York, Aug. 19.—This so-called "National" amateur golf championship being held by the U. S. G. A. at Garden City next month could be far more deserving of the tag "national" if it were based truly upon unrestricted amateur ability instead of having primary requisites of social status and bank roll.

I mean you may be one of the best amateur pill belters in these United States, but if you live on the wrong side of the choo-choo tracks and eke out an existence as butcher's boy, plumber's helper, mail carrier, truck driver, grocery clerk, etc., you have virtually no chance of competing in the "National."

In fact you can't even enter this "National"-unless you are a member of a club in good standing with the August body of badge-wearers who direct the destinies of the United States Golf Association. By good standing I mean a club that has paid its dues, etc., to the U. S. G. Thus the able mashie manipulators who can not afford to belong to clubs in their bailiwicks and who probably would be blackballed anyway because they earn their steak and potatoes the hard way, are automatically eliminated.

These "untouchables" in this Caste system of golf which seems somewhat alien to our widely publicized ideals of democracy are allowed to demonstrate their abilities once each year in the public links tourney through the benignity of the U. S. G. A. But as far as the "National" amateur is concerned, they are out.

Most of these young golfing enthusiasts who earn their victuals with their brawn cannot afford membership in swanky golf clubs where the dues and other assessments run into money—supporting swimming pools, dining rooms, bars, dances and other sundries that have no connection with golf. And in most cases the batter-than-thou members would be all aflutter and there would be a general lifting of lorgnettes if one of the overall and apron brigade drew out his savings and tried to join—so that he might try out for the "National."

There have been exceptions to this rule, of course—a few isolated instances where the prowess of the public links player attracted the attention of members of a club in need of publicity. And the plebian putter has been invited to join at virtually no cost. But such cases are exceptions, indeed. Former Champion Johnny Goodman was one of those exceptions. He came up from a cabin in the packing district and attracted the attention of club members as a caddy.

I think that the American public has the wrong impression of "national" amateur, and has had for years. Most people believe that the lad who wins this tourney is the ace amateur golfer in the country, but such is not necessarily the case and probably is not true at all. There are a lot of public links golfers who would put up a grand fight for that "National" amateur title if they were allowed to enter. The way the poor folks ripped the Beth Page Park, N. Y., course to ribbons in the public links tourney late last month is a good tip-off. They certainly would offer a genuine menace to the gold-spoon guys—the Suffern Tailers and George Dunlaps—if they were permitted to compete at Garden City.

Coramine, Handled Well, Takes Narragansett Stake Event

Stretch Rush Gives Filly Victory

Winner Pays $18.30 in Spite of Recent Saratoga Race.

By the Associated Press.

Narragansett Park, Pawtucket, R. I., Aug. 19.—Following directly up on her victory at Saratoga in the lone start made there, Mrs. C. S. Howard's Coramine earned $3,675 for her California owner when the filly won the third running of the Shawoment Stakes, six furlongs for 2-year-olds, here this afternoon.

The Stimulus filly scored by two lengths over A. G. Tarn's Mr. Blaze who had a length over C. V. Whitney's Peplum, the six furlongs being run in 1:12 2-5 by the winner.

In contention only briefly after the start was William H. Gallagher's Rudie, who was established as favorite on the basis of his two previous victories in New Engand.

Peplum Breaks First.

C. V. Whitney's Peplum broke on top but the heavily-weighted Foolish Moment, of the Dixiana stud, quickly overtook her and set a fast pace down the back stretch.

Around the turn Coramine pulled ahead of Foolish Moment as the latter tired of the going. She had stood for 11 minutes with 119 pounds, including Charley Stevenson on her back.

Foolish Moment chucked it entirely at the head of the stretch and finished last. The other three, Mr. Blaze, Talked About and Peplum stayed in the battle but could not catch Mrs. Howard's horse.

Coramine paid $18.30, $7.70 and $5.70. Mr. Blaze returned $4.90 and $3.90 and Talked About paid show betters on him $8.40.

The victory boosted Coramine's earnings for the year to $10,715. It was her sixth victory in 13 starts this season.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LITTLE SLEEPER, $7.60, $4.90, $3.30; COPO, $10.90, $5.10; OPOCA, $2.90.

LITTLE SLEEPER drew clear in the first quarter mile while racing under steadying restraint, drawing out steadily thereafter. COPO improved her position steadily in the last 3 furlongs and finished with good energy. OPOCA, away well, dropped back and came again through the stretch. BYE BYE WILL, unable to keep pace early, closed some ground. HIGH EXPLOSION closed some ground. LIGHT CHATTER unable to keep up after leaving the backstretch. KEEP GOING never could reach the leaders.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:50. Off at 2:52. Winner, Ascot Stable's br. h. (5), by Waygood—Oloya. Trained by H. Young. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $70; fourth, $30. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:47 2-5, 1:12 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SOME GOOD, $30.10, $13.10, $6.80; CAPUCHE, $9.40, $6.30; OUR CREST, $4.20.

SOME GOOD was prominent all the way and never far from the lead. In the run down the back stretch he gained the lead midway of the turn, withstood strong opposition from CAPUCHE and held him safe at the end. CAPUCHE was well up from the start and held on gamely to the close. OUR CREST, in trouble repeatedly in the run down the backstretch, moved up fast when called upon and, despite closing gamely, was unable to reach the first two. CHRYSEIS, badly outrun early, closed with a belated rush in the last quarter mile. AUNT FLOR displayed good speed, fought it out gamely for the first half mile, weakening thereafter. DEMONSTRATION, hard ridden to gain forward position, dropped back when the real test came.

THIRD RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 3:24. Off at 3:27. Winner, F. W. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RESERVIST, $3.90, $3.10, $2.70; BEAVER LAKE, $4.80, $3.40; OUR ADMIRAL, $3.50.

RESERVIST, prominent all the way, was rated along within striking distance of the leader, moved up stoutly on the outside nearing the stretch, supplanted BEAVER LAKE in the lead and drew out in the last furlong. BEAVER LAKE, restrained early, moved up fast nearing the far turn, gained command and, though holding on gamely, was unable to keep pace when challenged. OUR ADMIRAL, permitted to drop back early, outrun until straightened out in the stretch, closed going the fastest of all at the end.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:59. Off at 4:01. Winner, Dixiana's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHANCING, $15.50, $6.80, $3.60; FURFIBER, $4.60, $3.10; HOWARD, $3.00.

CHANCING was rated along back of the pace and holding this position on the outside, wore down FURFIBER after passing the furlong pole and drew out steadily. FURFIBER took command at once, drew away into a good lead and steadied along in front, fought it out gamely to close. HOWARD saved ground at the first turn, moved up steadily in the run down the backstretch, closed stoutly in the stretch, though unable to reach the first two. WATER SPLASH closed ground.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:49. Off at 5:49½. Winner, Mrs. F. Walker's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BUSBY, $45.30, $15.90, $5.70; TIME TO GO, $4.50, $3.10; KENDAL GREEN, $3.80.

BUSBY, steadied along back of the early pace, wore down SANDY BOY for the lead, drew clear but had to be hard ridden at the end to hold TIME TO GO safe. TIME TO GO, as usual slow to begin and badly outrun until leaving the backstretch, came wide into the stretch, though closing stoutly, was unable to overtake the winner. KENDAL GREEN moved up stoutly after rounding the far turn and saved ground in the stretch. STEALTH finished willingly. LADY CARROT, well placed early, unable to keep pace.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 6:21. Off at 6:23. Winner, Charles A. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MORGIL, $11.40, $6.50, $3.80; FOGARTY, $5.00, $3.10; ORTHOPRISM, $2.70.

MORGIL displayed speed from the outset, was taken under steadying restraint when HATS OFF took command and responded gamely when called upon, went to the front in the stretch and drew out steadily in the last furlong. FOGARTY, badly outrun until leaving the backstretch, moved up steadily thereafter and closed with good energy. ORTHOPRISM moved up and improved his position gradually in last half mile, and though making a game bid to reach the leader, was not good enough and weakened in last few strides. YAP was well up all the way. HATS OFF drew away into a good lead, only to falter badly in the stretch run.

Miller and Heurich Nines Battle to Third Tie of Title Series, 8-8

Game Saved By Catch of Russell

Brewers Trail, 6-0, and Lead 8-6; McAboy Batting Hero.

The baseball marathon being conducted by the Miller Furniture Co. and Heurich Brewery teams for the Industrial League championship continued at a merry pace yesterday as the principals staggered through nine thrill-packed innings to an 8-8 stalemate, their third in five games.

It took some brilliant, bum, plain, fancy and just ordinary baseball, put together on a riotous nine-inning framework, to bring about the newest deadlock and assure Washington of the longest sandlot championship series in its history. With five of the seven games originally scheduled already played, the series now stands at one-all.

Lose a Lot of Energy.

Both clubs flirted with victory and then perched precariously on the brink of defeat before finally emerging with nothing gained and nothing lost but a lot of energy. Heurichs were on the defensive from the first two innings—in which the Millers helped themselves to a 6-0 lead at the expense of Leon Riley and Bob Lyons—until the seventh, when they scored six runs on their own account and assumed an 8-6 lead.

Even as late as the ninth inning, which Carl Wahler opened with a screaming triple to left-centerfield, the Brewery boys were fighting for their baseball hides. It was Ev Russell, hero of Heurich's only victory of the series, who saved them in the sixth inning with a brilliant over-the-shoulder catch, made on the dead run with two men on base, and in the ninth it was Third Baseman Huck Stahl and Shortstop Art Zahn who shooed away defeat with their brilliant fielding.

McAboy in Star Role.

Lyman McAboy, former Maryland boxing star, was the Millers' savior, connecting for his fifth consecutive hit, a powerful home run beyond the crowd in centerfield that tied the game at 8-8 in the eighth inning. Carey Maupin's sensational defense play in leftfield also saved the Millers from becoming just a lot of broken furniture.

The series will be resumed at 4:30 o'clock today on the West Ellipse.

Manero Shoots 69, Leads at Lake Placid

Open Champion Has Total of 143, Equals Competitive Record for Course.

By the Associated Press.

Lake Placid, N. Y., Aug. 19.—Finishing in the rain late in the afternoon, Tony Manero, of Greensboro, N. C., national open champion, posted a 69 to jump into the lead in the Lake Placid open golf tournament at the halfway mark today with a 36-hole total of 143.

Equaling the competitive course record on his second tour of the course, Manero passed Matt Kowal, of Utica, and Clarence Clark, of Bloomfield, N. J., former New Jersey open champion, whose 144's had held up throughout the afternoon.

Playing far more spectacular golf than he did yesterday when he had to be content with a 74, three strokes out of the lead, the national open king reached the turn in 34, three strokes under par, and then returned in 35, even par.

Kowal, two strokes out of the lead last night jumped into a tie for second place by virtue of a subpar 71. He was out in 37 and back in 34.

Next in line to Kowal at the end of the second day's battle came Ted Turner, of Pine Valley, N. J., and Charles Schneider, of Wilmington, Del., tied at 145, while Clarence Doser, of Rochester, Wild Bill Melhorn, of Louisville, Ky., and Leonard Dodson, of Springfield, Mo., were bracketed at 146.

Colored Grounds In Annual Meet

Representatives of 23 colored playgrounds, expected to number about 3,000, will gather at Banneker Recreation Center at 9:30 a. m. today to compete in the outstanding event in the summer playground program—the track and field meet. The boys' city-wide meet was won last year by Cardozo.

A newly organized colored band from the National Training School for Boys will play. Contestants will be divided into five weight classes, with more than 20 events listed on the program.

Oliveri, Graham Win in Jr. Golf

Andy Oliveri, the defending champion, medalist and apparently hottest player in the tournament, and his most feared rival, George Graham, gained the semifinals in the District junior golf tournament at East Potomac yesterday with convincing victories over their respective opponents.

Oliveri swamped Al Stein, 5 and 4, while Graham was putting the skids under Ernie Garlem, 2 and 1. Both lads were impressive in victory, although Oliveri appeared to better advantage in his match.

Other semifinalists are Eli Blank, who disposed of Bobby Suit, 2 and 1; and Bob Morris, who ran roughshod over Byron Bear, 6 and 4. Blank meets Oliveri and Morris tackles Graham at 9:30 o'clock this morning. The survivors will tee off in the championship round at 1:30 p. m.

Shenkin, D. C., Loses Parks Net Match

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Aug. 19.—Eight men and eight women remained in the quest tonight for singles titles in the National Public Parks Tennis Tournament.

In a day that saw M. C. Hopper, Tulsa schoolboy, and "Big Bill" Hughes, of Memphis, join six other players in the quarter-final bracket of the men's division, seeded women stars also advanced with little trouble.

Two free-swinging Californians, Defending Champion Elizabeth Deike, of Pasadena, and Margery Lauderbach, of Los Angeles, lost but four games in their matches. Miss Deike vanquished Myrtle Clausen, of Minneapolis, 6—1, 6—0, while her coast rival subdued Lucy Mouledous, of New Orleans, 6—1, 6—2.

Only Ethel Haas, Buffalo, N. Y., of the seeded feminine list ran into trouble. She dropped the first set, 5—7, to Irene David, of Cleveland, before stepping up her game to win the last two, 6—2, 6—4.

Herbert Shenkin, the only entrant from Washington, D. C., was eliminated in the third round by Bill Hughes, of Memphis, Tenn. Hughes defeated Shenkin 6—4, 2—6, 6—1, 6—0.

Variety Club Lists Water Carnival

Tilting, Swimming, Diving on Program to Precede Showboat Cruise.

Ninety minutes of free fun will precede the second annual Showboat Cruise of the Variety Club Saturday night. The free fun, in the nature of a water carnival, will be held on the Washington channel just off the Wilson Line wharf from which the showboat cruise will pull out.

The program, which will be free to those who are not going on the cruise as well as those planning to sail with the showboat, will start at 8:30 p. m.—one and one-half hours before the cruise boat is scheduled to hoist anchor.

Included among the events in the water carnival will be canoe tilting, aquaplaning, diving, swimming and a battle royal between 12 embryonic Joe Louis's on a raft. The battle royal will serve as a grand finale to the presailing festival.

The carnival, which will be lighted by floodlights, will be clearly visible from the East Potomac Park side of the channel. Dr. Frank Shyne, chairman of the carnival, arranged all events in collaboration with Carl Bryson, of the Maryland Club Gardens who is in charge of all aquatic events.

Tickets for the cruise, which will give an opportunity to watch the water carnival from a point of vantage on the Wilson Line steamer, are retailing for $1.50.

Helen Stephens Stars in Meet

By the Associated Press.

Wuppertal, Germany, Aug. 19.—Helen Stephens, women's Olympic sprint champion, won two events, finished second in another and was a member of the American relay team which finished second to Germany today in west Germany's greatest women's track and field meet, witnessed by a crowd of 35,000.

Miss Stephens won the 100 meters in 11.6, beating Stella Walsh, of Poland, by two-tenths of a second just as she did at Berlin. The American girl was clocked in 24.1 in winning the 200 meter dash, again defeating Miss Walsh, who was timed in 24.2 seconds. The American girl also threw the shot 39 feet, 7 13-16 inches to gain second place behind Fumi Kojima, of Japan, who won with a toss of 40 feet 2 19-24 inches.

U. S. Takes Three Firsts in Sweden

Stockholm, Sweden, Aug. 19 (U.P.). United States Olympic athletes took three first places and a second at the international track and field meet here today.

Dave Albritton, of Ohio State University, won the running high jump with a leap of 6 feet, 3 63-64 inches, and in an extra jump did 6 feet, 7 7-32 inches. San Francis, of Lincoln, Neb., won the shot put with a toss of 52 feet, 1 3-16 inches. Foy Draper, of Whittier, Calif., won the 100-meters dash in 10.5 seconds. Harold Cagle, of Shawnee, Okla., was a close second to Fritz, of Canada in the 400-meters run, being clocked in 48.9 against the winner's 48.7

Espinosa's 282 Wins Ohio Open Golf Crown

Cincinnati, Aug. 19 (AP).—Al Espinosa, Akron professional and former Ryder Cup player, won the Ohio Open golf championship for the third time in five years today with a total of 282 strokes for 72 holes.

He nosed out Billie Burke, of Cleveland, 1931 National Open champion, by a single stroke, the latter's 10-foot putt for a birdie 2 and a tie on the last hole rimming the cup and refusing to drop.

Managoff and Garibaldi Mix It

Italian Is Menace to Foe's Standing in Weekly Feature Tonight.

Gino Garibaldi, the Italian menace who forsook spaghetti bending for bone bending, will be facing a severe test when he meets Ivan (the Terrible) Managoff in the feature of the weekly meeting of the Joe Turner Throwing Circle tonight at Griffith Stadium.

Ivan will prove a mighty obstacle for Gino if for no other reason than that the Rooshian has been built up into the outstanding summer attraction during the current outdoor season. Outstanding attractons being at a particular premium in this year of grunt and groan decline, it can plainly be seen that Ivan probably will resist mightily any attempt on the part of Garibaldi to unseat him from his local popularity.

Good Preliminaries.

Just in case the Garibaldi-Managoff encounter should fail to prove an artistic—or more important, financial — success, Promoter Joe Turner has backed up the main event with a promising set of preliminaries limited to 30 minutes each.

Of particular interest is the return of Ole Anderson, a contortionist, who is booked with George Lenihan in one of the supporting bouts. A Minnesota Swede, whose amazing muscular manipulation and leg work compares favorably with any seen here within the past several years, Anderson more than made good here last week when he won from Joe Dusek via the disqualification route.

Lenihan and Irish Jack Donovan, who meets Little Beaver, both are returning to the wars after a recent automobile accident near Havre de Grace, which resulted in a broken leg for Emil Dusek, the other occupant of the crash car.

In other preliminary bouts, Floyd Marshall will meet Doug Wykoff and Frank Judson will engage Henri Piers.

Jefferson Leads Plaground Loop

Jefferson Playground gained the final round in the annual playground elimination baseball series yesterday as Vic Hurley pitched and batted his team to a 1-0 victory over Orr. It was Jefferson's eighth consecutive victory.

Hurley choked off Orr's championship aspirations with a three-hit brand of pitching that handcuffed his opponents. Not a man got beyond second base as a result of the airtight support accorded him.

In the ninth he led off with a single, advanced on Davis' sacrifice, and galloped home with the winning run, when Conrad singled. Except for this outburst, Harper, Orr hurler, pitched a great game, limiting Jefferson to seven hits.

Louis Sadly Lacks Anybody to Fight fight than he was against me," said Herr Max. "He still can be hit with a right and I saw other weaknesses last night.

Max said Sharkey fought a dumb fight. "He was always easy to hit with a right," he said. "His biggest mistake was in trying to mix with Joe."

While West Forty-ninth street fought and refought last night's battle all over again, both principals left the city. Sharkey went to the offices of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club, collected a check for $35,621.67, then left by automobile with his manager for Boston. Disappointed over his failure against Louis, the former champion said he probably would never fight again.

Louis left by train for Detroit. He will rest there a week, then go back to Stevensville, Mich., to start work for any fights that may be made for him. Joe's share of the gate was $42,746, or 30 per cent. Sharkey's cut represented 25 per cent.

Parker Downs Frenchman In 4 Sets

19-Year-Old Destreman Is Beaten After Struggle, 6-4, 5-7, 10-8, 6-4.

By the Associated Press.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 19.—Nineteen-year-old Bernard Destremau, one of the three youngsters brought over here for international seasoning by the veteran Jacques Brugnon, gave Frankie Parker, of Spring Lake, N. J., stiff opposition in a fourth round match in the Newport Casino tourney today, and the latter, who ranks seventh nationally, had to call upon all of his great skill to qualify for the quarter-finals with a 6—4, 5—7, 10—8, 6—4 victory.

The young Frenchman, despite his unfamiliarity with grass court play, revealed a wide assortment of brilliant ground strokes. He got off slowly, but managed to pull even by taking the overtime second set, which found Parker a bit wild. Frankie swept the first four games of the third set before running into another erratic streak that lasted until Destremau pulled ahead of him by capturing five games in a row.

Appears Flustered.

The lead then went with service until the seventeenth game, when Parker's kills from the net cracked his rival, who appeared flustrated, because he had surrendered after building up a 40-to-15 lead against Frank's delivery in the previous game. The final set was a letdown for both, but Parker's aggressive tactics settled the issue.

The two other Frenchmen also were eliminated. Burgnow was knocked out by young Joe Hunt, of Los Angeles, 6—3, 6—1, 6—3, and Yvon Petra was the easy victim of Johnny Van Ryn, Philadelphia, 6—3, 6—4, 6—0.

A total of five Californians made the round of eight—Hunt, Bobby Riggs, the national clay court champion; Wayne Sabin, of Los Angeles, and Eugene Smith and Bob Harman, both of Berkeley.

On the Air Today

During the vacation absence of John Heiney, Post Radio Editor, his column will be conducted by various Washington radio personalities. Today's guest columnist is the hostess of WRC.

Diary of a Radio Station Hostess.

"Is Ma Perkins the Secretary of Labor?" Probably no one in the whole wide world but a hostess in a radio station would ever be asked such a question. I think the first thing I learned as hostess for Station WRC of the National Broadcasting Co., was that the public expected me to be a source of information on every subject, and, of course, infallible.

But let me turn to my log—we're very technical in radio you know, and my report in which all calls are listed is called "the log." "How do you get rust spots out of a handkerchief my sister's boy friend gave her and I borrowed without permission of? . . . "When does the last train get in from New York tonight" . . . "Will you tell me the exact potential radio audience of the United States?" Such questions, of course, do not constitute the majority of things we are asked. I call them my "one percenters," and they brighten my life considerably.

And then we hostesses have our thrilling moments. To be on duty during a national or local catastrophe is an experience never to be forgotten. During such an emergency we see what too many of us take for granted—the tremendous power of radio and the extraordinary and helpful use to which that power is put.

During the day the spring flood was at its height in Washington, telephone calls by the hundreds poured in from people separated from their families and unable to communicate with them. They all asked us to broadcast various appeals and communications. And how happy I was to assure them that every facility of our stations in all the flood areas was being used to alleviate the distress of the flood victims. And how uniformly grateful and appreciative they were!

But back for a moment to my "one percenters." One evening I had just greeted a Cabinet member who had come to the studio for a network broadcast and was very occupied in caring for a considerable party who had accompanied him, when the telephone rang. A man's voice—"Will you please tell me the title of the song "I feel like a feather in the breeze?"

And I must not forget the contests—how can I? The announcer had just said, "the contest closes tonight at midnight. Your entry must be postmarked before then." . . . Ting a ling a ling—a woman's voice. "What did the man say?" . . . I repeated the conditions. "I'll write the time on the envelope myself," the lady said, "the postman might be late."

But I love my job. The atmosphere of a radio station is electric and stimulating. To my desk come men and women whose names are familiar in every art and interest, and if variety is the spice of life, mine is indeed a highly seasoned dish.

Only one fly swims in the ointment—the hostess never has the last word, until, thanks to John Heiney—"Ladies and gentlemen of the radio audience, this is the Hostess speaking!" WRC's HOSTESS.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 19.—Right-about-face action of speculators tumbled corn vaues suddenly backward late today after 4 cents new soaring had outdone 16-year high price records. The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Continue to Work Higher After Slow Start; Corn and Wheat Advance.

New York Aug. 19.—After early uncertainty the financial markets again closed with a firm tone. Stocks improved in nearly all sections, but gains were modest and the sales volume was only about a million shares. Commodities were firm to higher, September wheat rose ⅝ cents a bushel. Corn rose nearly a cent a bushel.

In stocks, the best gains were to be found in the steel and farm implement groups, with a miscellaneous group of shares finding a good demand. Emphasis on the increase this week in the steel industry's operating rate, the recession in strike talk and the outlook for firmer steel prices held the stocks, as well as did the opening of bids on the Government's battleship construction program. Leading steel issues rose as much as two points to the best levels of a week. Crucible duplicated its best price in five years on a spurt of nearly three points.

Railroad stocks were steady to higher. They had the benefit of good car-loadings figures for last week and of some good earnings statements covering July operations, but the failure of Chesapeake & Ohio to lift its dividend depressed the Van Sweringen section. Alleghany issues dropped one to three points. Central, Southern Pacific, Great Northern and Santa Fe stiffened a point or more.

Chosen Few.

Motor stocks continued in a quiet zone, awaiting the introduction of new models. Chrysler worked upward a little. A single sale in Auburn brought payment of a point above the previous closing price. Public utilities were irregular and narrow. Consolidated Edison hardened. Metals generally were lower. Oils failed to respond to Standard's hint at higher prices. Little change was reported in prices for food, tobacco and chemical stocks.

Motor accessory shares were firmer. Electric Auto Lite and Murray Corporation were prominent. This is the time of year when the motor companies are doing business with the accessory companies on a larger scale. Pennsylvania Glass Sand preferred made its first appearance on the tape since listing two months ago. Commercial Investment Trust issues climbed 2 to 4 points, emphasizing the recent talk that installment and credit purchasing again is getting a good start in this country. Cuban American preferred rose more than 4 points.

Francs Decline.

Several interesting movements occurred in foreign exchange today. Francs weakened against both dollars and sterling, while the latter rose to the highest figure since June in relation to dollars. The strength in sterling as against francs brought a fall of 2 pence in the price of gold in London to the lowest in some weeks. It was reported that some metal was purchased there for American account, local banks also getting gold in India.

The rupee, incidentally, rose to a new high for several weeks against dollars and strength also was displayed by Argentine pesos, some of the Scandinavian exchanges, Shanghai dollars and Hongkong exchange. All have a relation to sterling. Here the French franc was on offer all day around the gold point, suggesting some further engagements of metal in Paris for shipment to New York.

The situation in France looks none too happy, even though the Spanish difficulty clears without bringing on general fighting in Europe. The recent public loan of the French treasury was not a success, and the New Deal Socialist administration has made it plain that if the people won't lend money to them they will manufacture it anyhow. The likelihood of any large scale repatriation of French capital from here or London is not an immediate cause for worry in the markets.

Trade News Favorable.

Mid-week trade news continued favorable. A higher operating rate for the steel industry this week was confirmed, and more talk was heard of a stiffening price structure. Output of electricity again rose sharply over the corresponding period of last year and railroad freight traffic last week again was higher. The gain in carloadings as compared with last year was 19 per cent and the rise over the preceding week was about 1 per cent, as indicated by reports of leading carriers.

The percentage gain in freight car loadings over last year was smaller than that of the two preceding weeks, but the small drop seems to have been because of an unusual bulge that occurred in 1935 rather than to a diminution in the pace this summer. The grain carrying business ought to be good this year, for corn, short in supply, doesn't usually move much over the railroads. Even livestock probably will move to market faster for the next several weeks than normally. The prinicpal effect of the drought will be felt by the railroads this winter and next spring.

Treasury Finance.

A week or two ago opinion in Government securities market circles was fairly well agreed upon the lack of need for the Treasury to raise new money on September 15, but now, with announcement of the financing due a week from Monday, opinion is not unanimous. It is still agreed that the Treasury does not need new money immediately, but it is pointed out that if the Government waits until December, when it has $808,000,000 in bills and notes to meet—$758,000,000 on December 15 and $50,000,000 the following day—it might be inconvenient to raise a lot of new money at the same time. Moreover, market condition then may not be so favorable as it now appears they will be on September 15. Various rumors have been heard as to the amount of funds the Treasury will need in December, in excess of what is raised through taxation, with one estimate at $1,500,000,000.

Cash Position.

The $514,000,000 of notes which are due on September 15 are now selling at a premium of around 23-32, indicating an expectation on the part of holders of "rights" to subscribe to new securities then on an attractive basis, for nothing else could so explain so large a minus yield. The Treasury has large balances in the reserve banks, running around $380,000,000, together with $1,135,000,000 in member banks, and can well avoid borrowing new money next month if it desires so to do. Apparently the whole matter hinges upon what December expenditures will be and how favorable the market is at the tax date. In the period July 1-August 13 the Treasury's net expenditure was $201,700,000 more than receipts from all sources. In the corresponding period a year ago the deficit on all accounts was $539,670,000.

Public Debt.

Under the law providing for cashing of soldiers' adjusted compensation certificates it was specified that the Treasury would issue special bonus bonds to the Veterans Administration to reimburse it for the money it had previously paid out of its general funds in the form of loans to veterans up to 50 per cent of the amount of their certificates. There is a good deal of conjecture as to the delay in so doing, especially in view of the speed and apparent efficiency which attended the issue of bonus bonds to former soldiers and the cashing of them. Presumably the issue of these bonds to the Government's life insurance fund will add to the public debt, even though the entire issue is held by a Government agency.

Fleming Urges Bankers To Go To Convention

Public Understanding of Banking the Objective, He Says.

Emphasizing the importance of "co-operation and mutual exchange of viewpoint among bankers and others," Robert V. Fleming, president American Bankers Association, sent a communication yesterday to all members of the organization urging their attendance at its annual convention, which will be held at San Francisco, September 21-24.

The convention program, he said, will call into "our councils speakers from various lines of business to give us their viewpoints and advice," and the plans for the convention discussions take into consideration the fact that one of the major problems of banking today is to develop its operations along lines that will create greater public understanding of its methods and services.

"Although banking has gone far along the road of recovery, one of its major problems still is to develop its operations on lines that will in themselves create greater public understanding of its methods and services," Mr. Fleming said. "It is my earnest conviction that such public understanding of banking is not only an essential defense against attacks from whatever source, but is also requisite to re-establishing it upon a firm and satisfactory basis of profitable operations. These considerations have been among the controlling factors in our plans for the sixty-second annual convention.

"The improvement in general conditions which is now taking place should be of material aid to bankers in carrying forward a constructive program for increasingly useful relationships between banking and business, as well as one of more helpful personal business services to all our people. Sound banking conducted in ways the public need and understand must be the aim of successful bank management.

"How can the banker make his operations and policies more understandable to the people of his community? How can better and broader financial services be soundly provided? How can banking improve its operating methods and income? These and many similar questions demand the earnest attention of all bankers. They call for a fresh counceling together and a new interchange of experience and advice among the members of our profession."

4. Then look for the numeral (in this case, 5) at either side of the map. Where the D and 5 meet is the vicinity in which the apartment is located.

10th Precinct Staff Shortage Hampers Work

Captain Says Building Is 'Ideal,' Admits Trouble in Coverage.

This is the sixth of a series of articles depicting conditions in precincts of the Metropolitan Police. A Post reporter yesterday visited the Tenth Precinct.

Capt. Ira Sheetz of the Tenth Precinct is proud of the building he works in and also of the men who work there—what there are of them.

Capt. Sheetz has been a captain in the Metropolitan Police for 14 years and for eight of those years he has been in the Tenth Precinct. He knows the situation there.

The tenth precinct is a big precinct, extending from Euclid to Buchanan street one way and from the back of Soldiers' Home to Rock Creek the other way. About 70,000 people live within its bounds, Capt. Sheetz said.

It is two stories high, of red brick. But this building is sunny and bright. Every room is well ventilated, even the cell block. The block, in comparison with some others, looks like a sun parlor.

In addition to housing its regular force, the building houses station WPDW of the Metropolitan Police. And there still is plenty of room.

There are only 84 men on duty in the Tenth Precinct. In the precinct are 17 beat areas, with three beats a day for each of the 17. Twelve men are attached to radio cars, of which there are two. Some others always are away on leave, some are clerks and chauffeurs and don't cover beats. By the time the captain finishes subtracting that way every day, he has a problem, because usually he finds he has only about 12 men to cover 17 beats.

Some of those beats are the hardest in the city. The section on Fourteenth street, between Harvard and Monroe streets, is more traversed at night than any other, probably in the city, because all the stores along that way are open until late at night. And then there is the "embassy beat" along exclusive Sixteenth street, which is included in the Tenth Precinct.

"There are a lot of other tough ones," Capt. Sheetz said. "And we don't have the men to cover them."

That is what Capt. Sheetz meant when he said he was proud of his men—"what we have of them."

Ponders Covering Precinct's Beats

Capt. Ira Sheetz, Tenth Precinct commander, has more beats in his bailiwick than he has men available to patrol them.

Racing Dogs Attack And Injure Girl, 18

Revere, Mass., Aug. 19 (U.P.).—Two of a pack of seven racing dogs knocked down and savagely attacked Esther Lamborghini, 18, of Revere, tonight as she watched them being exercised in a field.

The greyhounds made severe wounds in the girl's head, arms, legs and abdomen before she was rescued by the dog trainer, two policemen and two passersby.

The victim was taken first to Chelsea Naval Hospital, where the wounds were cauterized and later to Massachusetts General Hospital. Her condition was reported as "not serious." Hospital authorities said they could not determine immediately whether the girl would be disfigured.

Loyalists Halt Reich Ship

the city admitted tonight that the aerial and naval bombardments of the city by rebels were breaking the morale of the population.

Catalonia Seeks to Secede.

Barcelona, Aug. 19 (AP).—The Catalonian government moved tonight virtually to secede from the rest of Spain.

After the Generalitat, government council, decreed confiscation of all private property on Russian collectivist lines, it took steps to sever its ties with the central, Madrid government.

It will act henceforth, the council declared, in complete independence in maintaining public order.

An official bulletin proclaiming the decree, relieved all magistrates, judges, state prosecutors and other personnel appointed by the central government of their duties immediately.

Workers took control of all industries.

(Among American concerns with properties in Catalonia are the General Motors Corporation and the Ford Motor Co. The United States Embassy has warned the Madrid government indemnification would be expected for any American properties confiscated.)

Rebels Near Irun.

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

Irun, Spain, Aug. 19.—Battered loyalist Irun tonight feared that at any moment its streets might become a battlefield.

Rebel forces, in bloody hand-to-hand fighting, cut their way to within rifle shot of the city gates before three-inch shells from a government torpedo boat and machine-gun fire halted them.

Stray bullets bounced off the walls of the building within the city during the fighting outside the gates.

The government defenders feared that if the city should fall to the rebels, communication with the nearby French border would be cut off.

Refugees from the beleaguered city streamed across the boundary into France, where authorities decided tonight to establish a "sanitary cordon" to forestall the spread of epidemics reported on the Spanish side of the frontier.

Rebel Sortie Fails.

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

Government Field Headquarters, Nevalperal, Spain, Aug. 19.—Gen. Mangara tonight announced a government victory in which 500 rebels were killed or taken prisoners and 6 big guns captured from the rebel defenders of the walled city of Avila.

A band of insurgents including troops with civil guards, and Fascists in black shirts and red berets, sallied from Avila in an attempt to cut off Magada's forces from his base, the report received here said.

If successful the flank movement would have defeated the government's hope of keeping closed the rebel line of escape to Portugal, and would have restored control of the power station supplying Avila, now cut off by Mangada.

Madrid "Digs In."

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

Madrid, Aug. 19.—Socialist government leaders tonight girded their forces for "a serious, long war," and anxiously watched developments in the powers' neutrality moves.

Government leaders kept silent on concrete evidences of French sympathy to their cause, but insisted Spain was justified in receiving aid from foreign powers in a civil war.

At the same time, high government sources said, any direct aid by a foreign power to the Fascist rebels would be considered a violation of international law serious enough to warrant submission before the League of Nations.

Loyalist war loards organized a "rear guard" as rebels prowled the adjacent Guadarrama Mountains.

Within the city of Madrid, the Communist adherents to the loyalist cause asked for transformation of all civil industries into war industries.

It was announced over the radio that the government's war chest had been swelled by more than 100,000,000 pesetas (approximately $13,000,000) seized from Catholic colleges, convents and homes of weathy rebel sympathizers and aristocrats.

Mrs. Zioncheck Still Ill.

Rebels Claim Aid Pledges

believe that law and order and protection of lives and property in Spain might become the paramount reasons for German recognition of any Spanish authority.

The foreign office, commenting on European neutrality moves, asserted, "The next move is up to Paris and the German viewpoint toward Spain has been very clearly stated in reply to the French neutrality note."

The German view is that before any collective neutrality pact can succeed the arms-producing nations (such as Czechoslovakia) must be sounded out as to their export policies.

Acting on predictions that the Spanish situation would come to a head within a week, the admiralty arranged to have German warships in Spanish waters.

The vest pocket battleship Deutschland and other vessels, which have been patroling the sea near Spain since July 26, are to be relieved by the cruisers Leipzig and Nurnberg, the vest pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee and the torpedo boats Jaguar, Wolf, Grief and Falke.

To Bid for Support.

Paris, Aug. 19 (AP).—The Madrid government was reported tonight planning to seize upon France's threat to abandon her neutrality stand as an opportunity to win allies.

Diplomatic sources said the Spanish government was drafting a letter to other European powers in an effort to prove the insurrection was supported by foreign nations.

The letter, the diplomatic report said, was inspired by the French declaration that it will desert its nonintervention policy if Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy openly aids the Spanish rebels.

To the contemplated letter, it was said, would be appended photostatic copies of documents found in captured rebel barracks at Barcelona and others taken from an Italian plane which crashed in French territory en route to Spanish Morocco several weeks ago.

They were reported to indicate Italian backing of Gen. Francisco Franco, Fascist rebel commander, early in the uprising.

The reports intimated Spain's Socialist government already had sounded out London and Paris on the advisability of sending such a letter. French officials, however, said they knew of no such plan.

French foreign office officials insisted reports that Italy's great air armada was set to reinforce the Spanish rebels must be viewed with reserve.

But, one official declared, "if Premier Mussolini envisages sending arms and munition to Spain, certainly the position of France must change immediately."

U. S. Urged as Arbiter.

London, Aug. 19 (AP).—The government of Great Britain tonight clamped an airtight embargo on the export of both civil and military planes to either of the Spanish belligerents and a suggestion was broached that the United States act as truce maker.

In ordering the embargo the government stressed the critical importance of nonintervention of any type in the Spanish civil war.

It was said authoritatively the action was taken to set an example to other nations which have been holding up agreement to the nonintervention pact.

Advancing the United States as a best qualified mediator in the Spanish strife, Whitehall officials declared that the European powers were too engrossed in their own political interests to serve as arbiters without being accused of partisanship.

At present the European powers can hope only that a united nonintervention policy may starve the belligerents into a cessation of hostilities, it was said.

When that occurs, British officials suggested, the United States or a South American nation might be the best one to step in.

Terrorist Conspiracy Laid Directly to Trotzky as Trial Opens.

end. It met twice today, reconvening in a night session after an earlier four-hour hearing.

Thirteen other accused plotters, rounded up after the present defendants were caught, will be brought to trial swiftly after the first group's fate is settled.

The prosecutors charged the German Gestapo (secret police) as a conspirator. They named Franz Weitz, a fugitive, as a go-between for Fritz David, one of the prisoners, who they charged was to have shot Stalin at the Comintern Congress last July.

The uninterested, what's-the-use attitude of the 16 prisoners was particularly true of Zinovieff, who rested his arms on the railing in front of him and frequently buried his head as though dozing.

They were charged with:

1. Organizing a center to seize power by terror.
2. Organizing terroristic groups to shoot Stalin and other leaders.
3. Actually killing Kiroff, who was assassinated at Leningrad, December 1, 1934.

Four Marked for Death.

The presiding judge, Gen. Ulrich, assisted by three associate military judges, questioned the defendants—all former members of the Communist Party—and received their pleas.

Four others were marked for death with Stalin. They were Klementi Voroshiloff, commissar of war; Lazarus M. Kaganovich, chairman of the all-union peasants congress and commissar for railways; Gregory K. Orjonikidze, commissar of heavy industries, and the Ukrainian Communist Party leader, Postisheff.

The pleas brought a sudden climax to the trial at which 500 persons, whose credentials had been carefully scrutinized, were admitted.

plotters and, turning to face Zinovieff, called him a liar.

"He was always a liar," the witness, T. Smirnoff, added.

Smirnoff, one of the lesser defendants, denied he had carried instructions from Trotzky or had actively plotted the terror, but added:

"I belonged to the (conspiracy) center and accept full responsibility for membership in that group."

T. Reingold, another defendant, testified four men highly placed in Soviet officialdom had, in 1932, indorsed the assassination of Stalin as the only way to cleanse the party. He implicated Commissar Alexei Rykoff of posts and telegraphs; Nicolai Bukharin, editor of the government organ Izvestia; M. P. Tomsky, former chief of trade unions and now head of the state publishing house, and Gregory Sokolnikoff, former Ambassador to England and assistant commissar of foreign affairs, who was later ousted as head of the timber industry.

Radek Named.

Reingold cast suspicion on another high ranking official, Karl Radek, who as an exponent of Communist policy in Izvestia has been close to the inner councils of the government. The mantle of power, Reingold testified, was to have fallen on Radek if Kameneff, Zinovieff or any other the other conspiracy leaders were caught.

Radek was a former associate of Trotzky and has been in trouble before. He was exiled in 1928, but after repudiating his stand with the exiled Bolshevik, was welcomed back to Russia. His authoritative articles have been missing from the Russian press for more than a week.

Derides Proceedings.

Hoenefoss, Norway, Aug. 19 (AP).—Leon Trotzky, whose alleged followers are on trial in Moscow charged with a plot to overthrow the Soviet government, derided the proceedings tonight as "humbug."

"For political vengeance," the exiled Bolshevik exclaimed, "the trial puts the Dreyfus scandal and the Reichstag fire in the shadow.

"The process is all humbug. The confessions were forced by the 'O. G. P. U.' (secret police) which gives the accused a choice between confessing, according to the O. G. P. U.'s desires and taking lesser penalties, or death."

Winchester Kiwanis Holds Under Club Fete

Winchester, Va., Aug. 19.—Winchester Kiwanians were hosts tonight at a ladies' night program and an inter-clug meeting for the Capital District, at which Roe Fulkerson, of Hollywood, Fla., editor of the Kiwanis magazine, was the principal speaker.

Wendell Goode, president of the Winchester club, was in charge. Representatives of clubs were present from throughout the district, including West Virginia, Maryland, District of Columbia and Virginia.

A Collapse!

J. Frank Curtis, sheriff of Howard County, Md., yesterday came to Takoma Park from Ellicott City to bring back a prisoner. He went home empty-handed.

The prisoner, Daniel E. Snyder, 20, is charged with perjury. He allegedly falsified the age of Dorothy May Manuel, 14, when obtaining a license to marry her on July 24.

The warrant for his arrest was sworn out by the girl's father, Fred L. Manuel, of 120 New York avenue, Takoma Park, when she eloped last week with Snyder, a taxi driver. Snyder gave himself up to police Monday night after an unsuccessful attempt to reconcile his father-in-law.

He collapsed in the Takoma Park Police Station and had to be revived by a pulmotor. He was removed to Washington Sanitarium where Curtis went to get him yesterday. Doctors told Curtis, however, that he could not take the prisoner away unless he could provide hospitalization for him. Since there is no hospital in Ellicott City the sheriff had to go home alone.

4 District Drivers Fined in Maryland

Four Washingtonians were among those fined in the Hyattsville police court yesterday for traffic violations. One of these was among those committed to jail for various offenses.

Among those whom Judge George B. Merrick committed to jail was Henry L. Moore, 88 Myrtle street northeast, who was sentenced to the house of correction for three months for driving while drunk. He was also given two days in jail in default of $2 in fines for reckless driving and having no registration card.

James Johnson, colored, Bladensburg, was given 3 months in the house of correction for driving while drunk, and 10 days in jail for failing to pay a $10 fine for having no license.

Leroy Spriggs, Glen Arden, Md., was committed for ten days in default of a $10 fine for driving without a license. William J. Peterson, colored, North Brentwood, Md., was sent to the house of correction for three months for taking the pistol of Town Policeman Edward Patterson, colored, when the officer was trying to arrest him.

Bus Line Waits Ruling On Richmond Route

Richmond, Va., Aug. 19 (AP).—After eight hours of testimony today, a joint board acting under the Federal motor carrier act, took under advisement an application of the Virginia Stage Lines for interstate rights between Richmond and Washington under the "grandfather clause" of the 1935 legislation.
